Ouster Sought Of All Involved

... In Watergate Scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is being strongly urged by White House aides just below the top level to sweep out all those involved in the Watergate scandal, according to a staff source.

These aides in private, and major Republican office holders in public, insisted the quick removal of such persons is one of the few steps open to the President who spent the weekend in guarded seclusion.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., announced he will introduce on Monday a resolution calling on Nixon to take the case out of the hands of his appointees in the Justice Department and place it with a politically independent special prosecutor of irreproachable reputation and "impeccable" integrity.

Percy said, however, that he hopes Nixon will seize the initiative by making a full statement on the case and by firing all those members of his staff who have lost public confidence.

Robert W. Meserve, Boston, president of the American Bar Association, endorsed proposals for a special prosecutor in the Watergate investigation. Stressing that he was speaking personally and not as ABA president, Meserve told newsmen there is good precedent for the move, particularly in President Calvin Coolidge's appointment of a special prosecutor in the Teapot Dome scandals of the 1920s.

Meserve was in Washington for a Monday speech.

A similar proposal was made by Sargent Shriver, the 1972 Democratic vice presidential candidate, who said five former Supreme Court justices should be asked by the President to appoint a special prosecutor with jurisdiction over "every aspect" of the affair.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., said the White House may be putting out a deliberately false impression by implying L. Patrick Gray III was forced out of his job as acting FBI director.

The source on the White House staff said those aides urging Nixon to fire those so far implicated may be doing so at the risk of their own jobs if that advice is not taken.

Their own positions may become untenable," the source said, because the men they are seeking to oust include White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman and chief domestic adviser John Ehrlichman.

The Washington Post, in its Sunday editions, quoted an unnamed White House official as saying that presidential counsel John Dean III intends to swear under oath that he gave Haldeman and Ehrlichman regular progress reports on attempts to cover up the Watergate bugging.

The Post said at least two other high-level White House officials have concluded Haldeman and Ehrlichman supervised a coverup.

And it quoted one source as saying the President and his top advisers are aware of Dean's intentions and are planning a strategy to offset his charges.

Dean, the Post quoted its sources as saying, has written a history of his version of the bugging of Democratic party headquarters at the Watergate building and steps taken to prevent public disclosure of it.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said that if the Watergate affair is not cleaned up by 1974 chances for Republican success in that year's mid-term elections could be damaged.

In a copyrighted interview in U.S. News & World Report, Agnew also said he believes the Senate Watergate committee should stop its investigation and postpone public hearings until the conclusion of the investigation being conducted by the federal grand jury.

"If we get through it (Watergate) and finish it in the public consciousness," he said, "then I don't see how we're going to be hurt by it. If it's still dangling it's going to hurt us because it's being discussed as a cover-up and it's eroding confidence."

Agnew said he believes Nixon is moving "in a determined way" to resolve the affair and said he is confident of his ability to do so.

"People are going to be cleared or indicted and when speculation is put aside, then the full impact of the Watergate affairs can be properly analyzed," he said.

MS. LEUNG ... connection remote.

'Novice' Is Lobbyist

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

"Political science and politics are somewhat remotely connected," observed the first official lobbyist for the Nebraska Women's Political Caucus (NWPC).

Yvonne Leung, a first-time lobbyist, is quickly learning that political reality is "what you deal with in the legislative halls" and not "what you've read in books."

Versed in a theoretical rather than a practical background — she holds a degree in political science — Ms. Leung went into the job "cold," but not in the political sense, she hastened to add.

Although she admits to never having been in the State Capitol Building before assuming her new duties, Ms. Leung explained that politics has always remained a major interest in her own house.

Spending time on the sidelines learning to be competent is the way Ms. Leung has entered into the business of lobbying.

Although still feeling like a "novice," Ms. Leung expressed her amazement at how "sophisticated" one can get in such a short time.

As far as proposing any new legislation, NWPC and its lobbyist felt it best to wait until they had established their credentials and felt more sure of themselves.

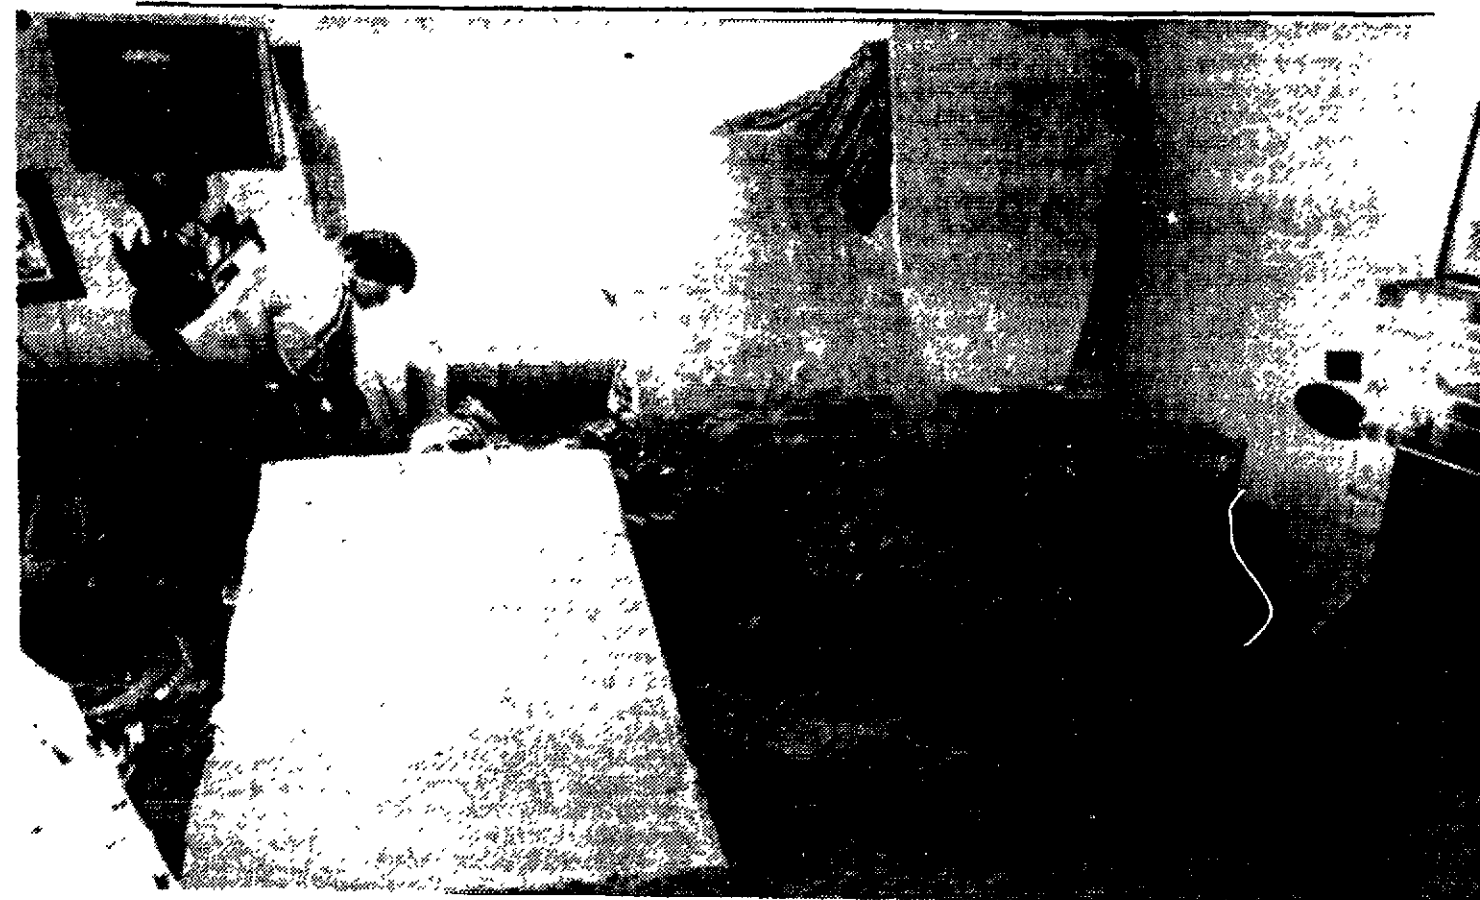

Responsible for NWPC's low-key role is a desire to change the image in the state of the politically active woman from that of a "pushy, hostile bra-burner" to that of a "reasonable" person, remarked Ms. Leung.

Because of the ERA controversy this year many women have learned the ropes of the political process, believes Ms. Leung. Whether pro or con on the issue, women now know how a legislative committee works and have seen how they can influence what happens in the state's law-making body.

Ms. Leung feels that anyone who wants to become involved in the political process can do so quite easily, although few people are aware of this.

For Ms. Leung there is a certain "exercise of power" in being a lobbyist with all the personal confrontation that comes with being a state senator.

Although a lobbyist's work proverbially ends when the gavel goes down, this has not been the case with NWPC's newcomer. Keeping on top of things has been a full-time job for Ms. Leung. She looks forward to a summer of study and research following this legislative session so that next year "we'll know where we're going."

DAMAGE ... in a home several hundred yards from blast scene.

Bombs Still Exploding In Rail Yard

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Bombs carried aboard a munitions train continued to explode Sunday, more than a day after a series of blasts turned a rail yard into a square mile of flaming boxcars and flying shrapnel.

The continued detonations of the 250-pound bombs, the sort dropped by American B52s in Southeast Asia, prevented Air Force and Army bomb experts from moving into the still-smoking Roseville yards of the Southern Pacific Railroad 15 miles northeast of Sacramento.

The experts said they could not determine the cause of the new explosions until they can examine the debris scattered among bomb craters and twisted rails of the railroad yards.

Three of the 52 persons injured in the explosions remained in hospitals Sunday. No deaths were reported.

Damage will run to "untold millions," Sacramento County Sheriff Duane Lowe said.

The blasts were triggered Saturday morning after railroad workers spotted smoke coming from one of 21 Defense Department cars carrying the bombs from a naval weapons depot at Hawthorne, Nev., to Port Chicago, Calif.

A Southern Pacific Railroad spokesman said Sunday the cause of the original fire could have been improper loading of the bombs by Navy personnel at Hawthorne. The bombs are strapped down, but "there's plenty of room for friction" of the sort that could cause a fire, said James C. Shea, a Southern Pacific vice president.

All injuries were reported to be minor, and there were no reports of missing persons. The Roseville yard, a major switching point for the Southern Pacific, is near a heavily populated suburban Sacramento area, but thousands of nearby residents apparently escaped injury or death by fleeing within minutes of the first explosions.

The bomb squads combed nearby fields and housing tracts for unexploded bombs scattered by the force of the explosions while they awaited the opportunity to move into the main blast area.

The bomb experts were planning to use trucks to move the bombs as soon as they were given the go-ahead to enter the area, a Defense Department spokesman said.

"We haven't decided where to take these things," said Air Force Capt. Richard Sheffield. "We can desensitize a small part, but eventually they must be detonated."

Sheffield added that he thought whole, unexploded bombs might be taken back to the Navy depot at Hawthorne, Nev., where they were initially loaded on to the train.

Fragments of bombs may be carried to an isolated area in Sacramento County and destroyed there by burning, he said.

Part of the area bomb squads were to cover included fields of waist-high grass, military authorities said. The men were to wear protective jackets.

Numerous 250-pound bombs were reported on the ground following the series of explosions that first rocked the yard, Southern Pacific's biggest switching point in California, early Saturday.

A Defense Department spokesman said authorities had to agree the danger to bomb squads was "minimal" before giving the go-ahead to send them into the area.

About 2,500 persons remained evacuated from homes in the area Sunday, according to the State Office of Emergency Services. An earlier estimates by the Sacramento County Sheriff's had placed the number of evacuees at 35,000, but a state emergency official said that figure appeared much too high.

Six persons were booked for investigation of looting, authorities said, and police patrolled the area to keep the curious away.

State Board Plans To Develop Policy For School Land Sales

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Given the go-ahead from the Legislature, the State Board of Educational Lands and Funds Monday will tackle the task of establishing a policy for the sale of the state's remaining 1.5 million acres of school lands.

Morris Reynolds, executive secretary of the board, said the Monday meeting was called especially to determine how the five-man board should go about implementing LB145.

The 1973 Legislature gave the board the authority to extend leases held on the state's school lands for periods ranging from three to eight years if by delaying the sale the state's interest is best served. Previously, a 1965 mandate compelled the board to sell all of Nebraska's school lands as the leases expired.

The money derived from the sale of and leases on school lands is used to help support the public schools.

Reynolds said the board most likely will adopt a policy incorporating both sales and extensions of leases, since an estimated 1,000 leases out of a total of 4,400 will expire by the end of this year.

Even if the board so wanted, most of the 1,000 parcels of land could not be sold due to the sheer volume of work involved, Reynolds noted.

In addition to giving the board discretion in sales, the new law allows the board to subdivide parcels, a feature particularly significant in areas with high recreation value, such as Lake McConaughy. The subdivision also dedicates streets and alleys, thus increasing the total value of the land involved. And even after a sale, the state retains all mineral rights to the land.

LB145 was introduced on behalf of Gov. J. James Exon after public attention was focused on the auction of 640 acres of school land in the scenic Fort Robinson area in northwestern Nebraska.

An injunction was issued to halt the proposed sale after outdoors and farm groups criticized the sale of the prime recreation area as an act of "supreme folly" when other states are spending millions to acquire public lands.

Opponents of school land sales maintained that the sales are no bonanza for the schools and said that the only beneficiaries of school land sales are the people who intend to buy them.

Still, it has been noted, the new law is no assurance that land having high historic or recreational value will not be sold.

One Of Quints Still Critical; Others Stable

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — One of five children born to a Brush Prairie, Wash., couple on Thursday remained in critical condition Sunday.

A hospital spokesman said, however, that the life signs of the baby, Diane Katherine Anderson, had not deteriorated during the previous day.

The spokesman said the other four babies were in stable condition and were having no problems. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Anderson.

The hospital spokesman said Diane, last of the five, was suffering respiratory difficulties. However, he said, "Her condition has remained stable ... which is encouraging."

School Board Foes Share Similar Views

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln Board of Education candidates share similar views on state aid to education and a number of matters related to teacher rights.

The responses of the six candidates on questions related to those matters were contained in a questionnaire made available by the Lincoln Education Association.

The LEA asked, for example, the candidates' views on state aid to education.

Here is how they responded: Louis L. Roper: "I am interested in state aid to education as a supplement to local funding. However, I feel we should be extremely careful of what strings are attached to such state aid. We should not give up a number of local prerogatives just to have state aid."

Robert L. Rauch: "Nebraska is one of the lowest ranking states in regards to state aid ... (which) has to be increased in order for school systems such as Lincoln to survive. The local taxpayer cannot withstand any increased burdens in future years."

Wallace M. Rudolph: "I believe state aid to education is necessary in order to effectuate educational programs necessary to the development of each individual student."

Martin A. Dinsmore: "I am in favor of state aid ... (since) reliance on local property tax only is not the fairest and best way to support education."

Pearl R. Goldenstein: "More state aid is badly needed. The state should assume 50% or more of the cost of the local educational program."

Ted Dewey: "Additional state aid is needed if we are to expect any appreciable property tax relief."

The LEA also asked the candidates for their views on professional negotiations, or bargaining, and got answers varying from Rudolph's unqualified "I am in favor of professional negotiations" to Roper's opinion that negotiations "should be used only after discussions between teachers and the board have broken down."

Rauch said: "... teachers of Lincoln have been shortchanged for such a long time now that they seem to be getting used to it at this time each year."

Rauch, a former Lincoln teacher, said he would "strive to make certain that they get a fairer shake."

Dinsmore said he favors negotiations "when their purpose is to assure just and equal treatment of individual teachers."

Mrs. Goldenstein said she sees negotiations as reasonable, acceptable and potentially effective means for boards and teachers jointly to decide matters of concern.

Fatal Fire 'Started For Kicks'

Kansas City (UPI) — A district attorney said Sunday an 18-year-old newspaper boy started a fire that killed six elderly widows "just to get the thrill, the kicks" of watching it burn.

Wyandotte County District Attorney Nick Tomasic filed six charges of first degree murder, one count of attempted arson and one count of aggravated arson against Jimmy Massey.

Tomasic said he will ask a court to certify a 16-year-old who allegedly helped set the fire as an adult for prosecution on the same charges.

"The only indication we have for them starting the fire is just to get the thrill, the kicks," Tomasic said. "We have statements from both Massey and the juvenile. Massey said they just wanted to start a fire and watch it burn."

Tomasic said the juvenile was accompanying Massey on his paper route early Saturday when the two entered a 19-unit apartment building. They allegedly set fire to a stack of newspapers in the basement Tomasic said.

Waters Dropping In Flooded Areas

Flood levels on parts of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers dropped Sunday but more than 10 million acres of land remained under water and thousands of families were still out of their homes.

The Mississippi River reached its crest, or highest flood stage, at St. Louis and the National Weather Service said it "is beginning to fall slowly" at that point.

The river was still 13 feet above its flood stage at St. Louis and the weather service said it would be May 13 or 14 before it falls below flood levels — if there is no "additional appreciable rainfall."

Along the Mississippi's 1,500-mile length, however, more than 10 million acres of land, much of it prime farmland, remained flooded. Even without more rain it will take weeks for the waters to recede.

forecast called for a chance of showers through mid-week. However, the service's river forecast called for both the Missouri, and the Mississippi in the north, to drop.

Although the Mississippi was slowly dropping in the north, it was rising in the south. The Corps of Engineers said more high water was expected within the week in the lower Mississippi valley and said the Ohio and Illinois rivers were still rising.

The flood crest at St. Louis came on the 50th day that the river had been above flood stage. Levees were reported to be holding, but were soggy and under constant observation.

At St. Genevieve, a Coast Guard official said they expected levees to "be okay ... as long as we keep up the all-night vigil and watch out for any break." The river was still rising there and had cut the town in half. On Sunday, Roman Catholic priests in the isolated north section conducted Mass in a VFW hall. The head of the American Red Cross, Frank Stanton, flew into the town for an inspection tour on Sunday.

The National Weather Service said the Missouri River was "falling rapidly" above Hermann, Mo. The service said the slow drop in the Mississippi will relieve the "critical flooding on the Cuivre River. River des Peres and the Meremec River" in the St. Charles and St. Louis areas.

"Without additional heavy rains the Mississippi will fall to below flood stage from Gregory Landing to Hannibal, Mo., by May 8 or May 9," it said.

Although the waters were rising in the south, a Corps of 5 STATES ... declared disaster areas.

Engineers spokesman said they were "guardedly — very guardedly — optimistic" over the situation in the lower valley. Even with a return to normal river levels, the effects of the flooding were expected to be felt for months. Agriculture officials in Arkansas are predicting a 50 per cent drop in cotton, rice, and soybean plantings.

The job of repairing and rebuilding flooded homes will also be a long one. "I'm recommending temporary housing be provided for at least a year," one federal official said in St. Genevieve, Mo. "Just because the water's gone doesn't mean you can go in and start rebuilding."

The Weather Service issued a special weather report on Sunday detailing the weather conditions that brought about the flooding — the worst in the recorded history of many river towns.

In said frequent rains last winter kept most rivers above normal levels and then, in March, two to three times the normal rainfall for the region fell. It said a snowstorm in early April added to the problems through runoff and the situation reached the current crisis level after heavy rains 10 days ago.

Flood Specialists Assist Homeless

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo. (AP) — "We shoot straight with these people. We don't just build up their hopes," said a member of the federal relief force assisting the homeless along the flood-stricken banks of the Mississippi River.

Nancy Himmelwright, 23, a veteran of last summer's relief effort during the Pennsylvania flooding, was one of 15 Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) staffers sent from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to Missouri to process applications for temporary housing.

"The people in Missouri are used to floods and they are not as upset as the people were in Pennsylvania. But even so, they never had anything like this. And when your house is covered by water, it's very hard to sit down and fill out a form for someone. These people want help now," she said.

Heading the team of relief specialists in St. Genevieve is Frank Bales, a Defense Department officer from Denver designated by the Office of Emergency Preparedness to coordinate the St. Genevieve center, one of nine established in Missouri.

"Our top priority is temporary housing," he said. "We have more than 170 homeless families in St. Genevieve and many are staying with relatives and friends. The biggest problem is the 103 families from Kaskaskia," he said.

Kaskaskia Island, which is part of Illinois but is tied more closely tied economically and socially with Missouri, is under 16 feet of water and the 9,600-acre island may be devastated before the Mississippi rampage ends.

"Mobile housing is a necessity for the people from the island," Bales said. "They have to be nearby to be able to recover their agriculture operation and rebuild their homes or build new ones."

The OEP was authorized Saturday to provide relief for Kaskaskia families in Missouri, where they have been evacuated instead of Illinois where they are legal residents.

James Picou, 48, was the last resident to leave Kaskaskia Thursday. He was born on the island where his grandfather began farming in 1850. He was seeking temporary housing at the federal center and said he was uncertain whether he could ever return to his farm.

"If we don't get more flooding breaks, we might plant a partial crop this year, maybe a quarter," he said.

Picou, who lived with his mother, said if the island could not be planted this year, he would not be able to continue farming.

"I can't wait a year without a crop. I can't make it. I'll have to change my mode of living, go and find a job somewhere in town," he said.

One reason for the critical housing situation in the St. Genevieve area, about 60 miles downstream from St. Louis, is that there are few rental apartments or houses.

Jack Carsten, of Jefferson City, Mo., a Red Cross flood specialist who spends four months of each year working on flood disasters, said "We need at least 125 housing units in this area but they don't exist."

Carsten said HUD has mobile homes available in Pennsylvania, where they were used for 1972 flood victims, but no one has made a decision to ship them to Missouri or other Mississippi Valley rural areas which also have similar requirements.

Community representatives notified Gov. Christopher Bond and Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., late Saturday of their urgent need for housing and asked their assistance.

The federal assistance teams include disaster specialists from the Small Business Administration, the Internal Revenue Service and the Social Security Administration.

Mike Santambrogio, of the Internal Revenue Service office in St. Louis, is informing flood victims on how they can amend their 1972 tax return to include flood losses. He said this would particularly benefit many area farmers who had good crops last year.

"Also, if they had a refund coming and have not yet received it, we are speeding that up."

The SBA is making loans available to rebuild homes and businesses.

HUD inspectors are saving some time by declaring as eligible for relief those houses which are inaccessible because of the high water.

"It will take a while for them to get back. They have to wait for the houses to dry completely before any repair work can begin. Just because the water's gone doesn't mean you can go in and start rebuilding," said Miss Himmelwright.

Bales added, "I'm recommending temporary housing be provided for at least a year."

World News

The disaster claimed another victim Sunday. A 14-year-old girl died in a St. Louis hospital from injuries she received when she fell from a sand truck during sandbagging operations at St. Genevieve, Mo. Hers was the 11th death attributed to the flood.

With seven states declared federal disaster areas, aid was coming in from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Small Business Administration, the Internal Revenue Service and other agencies. "Our top priority is temporary housing," one official said in St. Genevieve, Mo., where 170 families were forced from their homes.

The Army Corps of Engineers estimated that 35,000 people had been evacuated from their homes in Louisiana and Mississippi alone. Many of the families were placed in federal and state housing projects.

The Weather Service said showers and thunderstorms have moved into northeastern Missouri and the extended

AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION MAINTENANCE

It is a recognized fact that in many instances, clutch failure in automatic transmissions is due to products of fluid oxidation being deposited in the clutch plates causing slippage.

Chevrolet Motor Division recommends that every 24,000 miles or 2 years' service, under normal conditions the powerglide transmission should have the following services:

- Remove clean & replace powerglide pan.
- Remove, clean & replace suction screen.
- Check vacuum modulator valve, replace if needed.
- Adjust low band, add new fluid as needed.

New FBI Head To Pursue Leads

WASHINGTON (AP) — William D. Ruckelshaus plans to take over as acting FBI director Monday with the intention of pursuing all leads turned up by the grand jury investigating the Watergate bugging raid, an aide says.

Press aide Jack Conmy told a newsman over the weekend that Ruckelshaus "is not simply going to be a caretaker director," although he told President Nixon that he would serve only temporarily—perhaps for two months.

Conmy said Ruckelshaus felt the FBI must "run down all leads turned up by the grand jury" in the Watergate case, which led to the abrupt resignation last Friday of acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III.

Ruckelshaus, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, was appointed to the post less than two hours after Gray's resignation.

Asked whether Ruckelshaus would assume personal responsibility for the Watergate investigation, Conmy answered: "He will be up to his neck in it."

Ruckelshaus moved over the weekend to spike reports that he will run for the U.S. Senate in his home state of Indiana next year. There had been increasing speculation that Ruckelshaus would run against old political foe Sen. Birch Bayh, who defeated him in a 1968 Senate race.

Ruckelshaus said in a statement that he would not run because the FBI "must not in any way be compromised by political ambitions."

It remained unsettled whether Ruckelshaus would be able to serve for more than 30 days without Senate confirmation, as claimed by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

A Justice Department spokesman said that under federal statutes, an acting director may not serve more than 30 days without confirmation. But, he said, that technically could be sidestepped by naming Ruckelshaus an associate director, who may serve indefinitely in that capacity without confirmation.

Ruckelshaus had his legal counsel study whether he could keep his title as EPA administrator while supervising the FBI until a permanent FBI director is appointed.

Conmy said the decision was up to Ruckelshaus, but he believed he would resign to maintain complete independence.

Conmy said he believed EPA Deputy Administrator Robert Fri would become acting director of the agency after Ruckelshaus concludes a farewell staff meeting Monday morning.

Conmy, who has been at Ruckelshaus' side throughout the sudden transition, said he would go with him to the FBI. There were no immediate plans for taking along any other Ruckelshaus aides.

Ruckelshaus could not be reached personally.

Agnew Sees Action By Nixon

Grand jury testimony is given in secret and the seven-member Senate panel wants many of the same witnesses to begin testifying soon before television cameras and under oath.

"What the Senate is doing at this point, it seems to me," Agnew said, "is creating an inference of criminal conduct around the people that it is examining. And they should not be engaged in trying to prove criminal conduct while the grand jury is still working on it."

End embargoed material. The President remained secluded Sunday at his mountain top retreat at Camp David, Md., his privacy protected by barbed wire fences, Marine sentries and a news blackout.

Sources indicated he was joined by a group of advisers after spending a rainy Saturday alone. Other White House staff sources reported speculation Nixon may be preparing some kind of dramatic announcement within the next few days, possibly a nationally televised speech.

Percy, interviewed on ABC's Issues and Answers, along with Weicker, said he hopes his resolution setting up a special prosecutor appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate never comes to a vote.

He said he would prefer the President take the initiative and urged him repeatedly to do just that.

The President's statement that he will suspend any aide who is indicted and fire any who is convicted is "not acceptable," Percy said.

If anyone is to be fired, Percy said, that decision should be made now.

Percy named two men whom he said the President might consider to take over the case from Asst. U.S. Atty. Gen. Henry Petersen. They are Curtis Bok, president of Harvard University and Edward H. Levi, president of the University of Chicago.

"The President, I think, has an obligation now that if he had no prior knowledge to say so," Percy said.

Greek Easter Time Of Eating, Cracking Eggs

ATHENS (AP) — Greece celebrated Orthodox Easter on Sunday in brilliant sunshine and with a mass exodus of millions from the cities to the countryside. Regent-Premier George Papadopoulos made his customary egg-cracking and folk-dancing tour of army barracks.

On the night before, a midnight Resurrection Mass, the proclamation of the customary "Christ is risen," and a colorful display of fireworks throughout the land symbolized the end of 40 days of fasting and the beginning of a period of eating and drinking and reveling.

Thousands of lambs throughout the countryside and in back yards were turning on the spit and millions of colored eggs were being cracked. The status symbols of the Greek Easter.

Watergate Keeps Government From Other Woes, Says Ford

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Ford II said Sunday the Watergate scandal is keeping the U.S. government from dealing with such major problems as inflation, the deterioration of the inner cities and pursuing better relations with the Soviet Union and China.

"The attention of the government is centered on Watergate and not on other problems that are facing this country," he said when asked what effect he thought the scandal was having on business.

Except to list some of the fields he thought were being neglected because of Watergate,

Ford did not pursue the matter further.

The industrialist interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," claimed that "the economic outlook for the rest of the year in the United States is very good," but warned "there's going to be more inflation."

He commented that "food and raw materials are really out of hand."

"You've got a demand-pull inflation in the food area," he said. "Affluent as they are, people want to buy better quality."

Ford said his company figured that inflation is currently running at an annual rate of 4.5 per cent, but said he did not favor imposition of new controls.

"I would hate to see a freeze at this time but it may become necessary," Ford predicted that auto workers would get a raise in forthcoming contract negotiations between the industry and the United Auto Workers AFL-CIO.

He said that although the government guide line for wage increases was 5.5 per cent, the industry figured 6.2 in order to allow for fringe benefits.

In the negotiations he said of the increase "I think it will be higher than 6.2, but I don't think it will be much higher."

The School Board thought enough of Ted Dewey to appoint him to fill a temporary vacancy.

We hope you'll think enough of Ted Dewey to vote for him for a 4-year term. We do.

Watergate Bugging Case Becomes Topic At Diner

NORTH ARLINGTON, N.J. (AP) — The breakfast regulars at Danny's Diner on Ridge Street put aside the sports pages one day last week and for the first time in the memory of Mary, the waitress, they discussed the Watergate affair.

Much of what was mumbled over the coffee and Danish by the bleary-eyed clientele was lost to history. But the significance was not so much what was said about Watergate, but that it was discussed at all.

North Arlington is a borough of neat brick houses across the Passaic River from Newark, N.J. It is predominantly white, middle class and prosperous.

The residents have a lot on their minds. "like real estate taxes, education costs, safety on the streets," said Harry Handrack, a certified public accountant.

They relate personally to events "Around here if a neighbor dumps leaves on his backyard a person gets more excited than if he hears the government is falling tomorrow," laughed Beverly Murphy, managing editor of the weekly North Arlington Leader, only half in jest.

A reporter who spent election day last November in the borough found it solid Nixon territory. That day the voters shrugged off questions about the Watergate affair as they went to the polling places. It was too remote an issue, too impersonal.

Today the people of North Arlington have stopped shrugging off Watergate and are starting to face up to its implications. Everyone contacted during two days of interviews last week said Watergate was becoming a major topic of conversation.

"I must spend about a third of my time with my friends discussing Watergate," said Lois Palaski, a young housewife with two children. "The rest of the time we talk about the high food prices."

John O'Connell, a freight manager who voted Republican for the first time last November, said, "Watergate is a big issue when I'm with my friends, and at work we're concerned about it."

A men's clothing store owner, Philip De Angelis, said his friends are concerned "It's all these headlines," he said. "How can we possibly ignore them?"

Brother Clement, the principal of the Queen of Peace Boys High School, said Watergate has come up in his social studies classes.

Many North Arlington

residents interviewed still have faith in President Nixon. "My view of the President has not changed with Watergate," said Mrs. James Carchidi, wife of an accountant who said she voted for Nixon last November. "Watergate is like a web, you don't know where it starts or ends," she said.

Freight manager O'Connell said he still doesn't regret crossing party lines to vote for Nixon. "The President is just too big to get involved in something like this. It's one of the biggest scandals to hit the country but he has to be above it."

But some of the President's supporters are concerned he may become more deeply involved. "If they could tie Nixon into this thing, then I would say, 'Goddamn, it is bad,'" said accountant Handrack.

Clothing store proprietor De Angelis said, "I would still have voted for Nixon. But if this thing continues, it could hurt the government seriously."

Advertising man Tony Cornell could scarcely contain his anger over Watergate. "I am a registered Republican, and I voted for Nixon last November but I say now they should take all of his staff and hang them."

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

An hour late for work this morning, eh? Maybe the boss will settle for your daylight saving time excuse and maybe he won't. At any rate, you are or should be doing everything an hour earlier than usual for the rest of the summer.

Actually, it is not an hour earlier than usual, but an hour earlier than has been the case for the past six months. Whether standard or daylight time is usual is a matter of opinion, since we have six months of one and six months of the other during the year.

We have always been an advocate of daylight time simply as a matter of personal preference. Others, of course, are of another persuasion, either for personal or business reasons. There are those nocturnal kind of people who like the night and they would prefer standard time.

There are people such as farmers who start their day at sunup and daylight time means they must rise an hour earlier. Man may change the hours in his day but nature pays no attention to him.

Thus, if sunup has been coming at 6 a.m., the farmer could rise at 5 a.m. and be ready to go at the first crack of dawn. But if he rises at 5 a.m. under daylight time, it would actually be 6 a.m. and he would not be at all ready by sunup. To be ready to go at sunup — an awful thought for us city folks — he would have to rise at 4 a.m.

We still like daylight time but we can sympathize with our farmer friends. It hits him on the other end of things, too. If he moves back his day and works to sundown, which a lot of them do in the good summer months, his day ends, not at 8 p.m. but at 9 p.m.

Thus, the farmer loses an hour that he might otherwise use for shopping in town or relaxation before hitting the sack. And if you are getting up with the sun, you would want to hit the old sack by about 9 p.m.

The change of time is confusing, of course. You are told to set your clock one hour ahead but what does that mean? One might interpret that as going either way with the hands on the clock.

But ahead means forward. It means, too, the loss of an hour and you won't get it back for six long months. When you go from 2 a.m. to 3 a.m. by way of daylight saving, it is the quickest hour you have ever spent.

But as is the case with so many things, what you don't know won't hurt you. That is probably why they make the change in the middle of the night — people sleep right through it and never know the difference.

Of course, they could make the change in the middle of a working day and it would be welcome by the vast majority of people. If the change were made at 4 p.m. today, for instance, you would work to 4 p.m., set the clocks at that moment to 5 p.m., have your eight hours in and head for home.

It would mean you would get paid for eight hours of work while having worked only seven. But it would be bad news in the fall when we go back to standard time, giving you a nine-hour day but only eight hours pay.

So maybe it is better that we sleep away in the night the hour we just lost and the one we will gain again the last day of October. For awhile the time change may upset your personal equilibrium but you will become accustomed to it before long.

When you sit down for supper tonight at 6 p.m. it will really be only 5 p.m. compared to the day before. And when it's time for the kids to go to bed at 10 p.m., they will undoubtedly remind you that, in reality, it is only 9 p.m.

RICHARD L. WORSNOP
Nixon And Willy Brandt
To Hold May Conference

WASHINGTON — President Nixon reportedly views himself as a latter-day Disraeli. West German Chancellor Willy Brandt is said to have played by Metternich. Nixon and Brandt will confer in Washington May 1-2. If both don their chosen historical masks, the meeting may turn out to be an exercise in 19th Century balance-of-power politics.

Such a result should surprise no one. The American and West German leaders have lately been pursuing a type of foreign policy known in Bonn as Ostpolitik.

It is possible that Nixon and Brandt will find it more difficult to talk to each other than with Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev, whom both are scheduled to meet within the next two months. As Raymond Vernon, director of Harvard's Center for International Affairs, recently noted in Foreign Affairs magazine: "Today, the assumption that the United States could be expected to use its great economic and military strength in benign and unhostile ways has been badly eroded in Western Europe. The Suez crisis of the 1950's may have begun the process; but it was fortified by the U.S. role in Vietnam, ratified by the U.S. decision unilaterally to suspend the convertibility of the dollar, and confirmed by the independent style of the United States in the conduct of its foreign relations."

These resentments found expression at a convention earlier this month of Brandt's Social Democratic Party. Leftist members of the party introduced resolutions calling upon Bonn to stop paying off costs to Washington for American troops stationed in West Germany, condemning "American genocide" in Vietnam, and denouncing American conduct of the Indochina war.

At Brandt's insistence, these proposals were defeated by overwhelming margins. Instead, the convention adopted a resolution stating, in part, that "the political and military presence of the U.S.A. is essential for maintenance of the military balance of power in Europe."

Fred Luchsinger, editor-in-chief of Swiss Review of World Affairs, would agree with that assertion. "The central issue (for Europe)," he wrote, "is the secure continuance and further development of the Atlantic foundation, without which European policy in the front yard of the vast Soviet empire continues to be unthinkable."

The West German press appeared relieved that Nixon and Brandt would compare notes before either met with Brezhnev. As the Frankfurter Allgemeine put it: "Nightmare would have been a mild word for the vision discussed in many places, that Brezhnev, at the time of his June visit to Washington, could begin by informing the President of the attitude of the Bonn government in regard to important international questions, at first hand, after visiting Bonn in May."

It must be remembered, though, that the bilateral meetings involving Brandt, Brezhnev, and Nixon are only part of a series in this "Year of Europe." Other European leaders have come and will be coming to Washington in 1973, and Nixon intends to travel to Europe in the fall. The end result may not be a Congress of Vienna or a Congress of Berlin, but it is the sort of diplomatic activity worthy of a Metternich or a Disraeli.

Power To The President . . .!

Troubles Hit Army

The Army took its last draftees in December and since that time, operating as a volunteer force, it has experienced problems.

One which might not have been anticipated by those opposed to an end to the selective service system is reflected in the results of a study conducted by the Human Resources Research Organization of Alexandria, Va., which won an Army contract to try to find some way to predict potential AWOLs so they could be given special attention to head off any plans for going over the hill.

The results show that volunteer soldiers are more likely to go AWOL than draftees and the study predicts this may spell trouble for the all-volunteer Army.

Army officials last week admitted to another problem that was anticipated. New recruits, they said, are volunteering for non-combat Army jobs but they are not filling the necessary number of combat preparedness slots.

The Army hopes to offset this trend by upping the bonus for combat jobs from $1,500 to $2,500.

The problems now being experienced by the Army as it replaces draftees with volunteers lend unwelcome support to those few in Congress who bucked popular sentiment for ending conscription.

The supportive arguments are unwelcome because almost everyone in the country hoped and still hopes that a volunteer Army will work.

It is just that the odds on a superpower maintaining a fighting force sufficiently superior in quality and quantity on a volunteer basis are long indeed.

Hopefully the new Army can offer enough incentives to fill the grunt jobs and keep the AWOL rate down. And hopefully the Army can carry its weight in an integrated defense apparatus so strong that it need not be used, because, unfortunately, the realities of world relationships do not yet call for the abandonment of standing armies and defense systems.

It would not be surprising, however, in view of the present problems, if a peace-time draft were re-established in the future.

Tomorrow's Election Crucial

Tomorrow's city general election will be an important one for Lincoln.

With exceptionally qualified fields to choose from, Lincoln voters will fill three seats on both the Board of Education and the City Council and will also return two veteran members to the Lincoln Airport Authority.

The council election is especially important in view of several far-reaching decisions looming immediately on the horizon. Lincoln is at another crossroads with regard to expansion. The new council will consider the Goals and Policies report, which would set the tone for future Lincoln development. Specifically, the new council will have to deal with the controversial Stevens Creek issue and three zoning requests which would pave the way for the development of shopping centers approximating the size of Gateway and in one case exceeding the floor space found in the entire downtown area.

Crisis Ghost Goes West

ATHENS — An extensive survey of the Pacific-Asian area leads to one paramount conclusion. The storm center has moved westward. It is no longer Southeast and South Asian regions that threaten world conflict. Now we are back to square one — that Southwest Asian area known as the Middle East.

This is not to say peace is breaking out elsewhere. Indochina still resembles a can of scorpions with major fighting in Cambodia and minor fighting everywhere else. But the United States is out, and with it the threat of super-power showdown.

A riproaring little war continues in the Southern Philippines where Moslem guerrillas, aided by Libya and through Sabah (Malaysian Borneo), are expanding their bloody struggle. From Sikkim along the Himalayas to Pakistan's Northwest frontier and Baluchistan provinces, violence and change are in the air.

Yet the focal point of international attention is again among Arabia's whirling sands. One mini-war persists in Dhofar, part of Oman, and there are continual affrays in the sheikhdoms of the Persian Gulf, most recently Iraq's incursion into Kuwait. Iran is rearing on a massive scale for possible trouble to the East (if Pakistan collapses) or West (if Iraq succumbs to ambition).

Dominating all else, of course, is the endless Arab-Israeli contest for Palestine. Even during its moments of quiescence, this is marked by spurts of murder and terrorism on both sides. For the whole earth this has particular importance for three reasons.

(1) — It remains the only field of tension where the super-powers are directly involved through confrontation by client states. (2) — It is immediately linked to mounting energy problems of the U.S.A., West Europe and Japan, whose industries rely on Middle Eastern oil. (3) — And it has deep emotional and religious overtones.

In all Asia, apart from the turbulent southwestern tip, movement has replaced the angry stalemate of recent decades. The United States is trying its best to get out of Indochina, which is like climbing out of quicksand. Russia would like to substitute its own influence, acting through Hanoi on the east and New Delhi on the west; but its chances of success are poor.

Neither Peking nor Washington is likely to accept such a change in the power balance and few if any of the regional powers want it. Even India is tilting a bit away from its over-dependence on Soviet generosity. China would certainly, in a Hobson's choice, prefer American influence to Soviet influence in the south. But China is not yet a super-power or even a major industrial power and, as Chou En-lai assured both President Nixon and Japanese Prime Minister Tanaka, Peking has no expansionist impulses. Its current policy seems interested only in frustrating Soviet efforts to ring China with Russian allies. In this respect it is significant that Peking made no move during recent troubles in sensitive Sikkim and probably hopes to see India's ship of state veer toward more normal non-alignment.

Despite the teetering edifice of a Vietnam cease-fire and the dangerous centrifugal forces that threaten to collapse what's left of Pakistan, the East Asian situation is immeasurably better than a year ago. At least there is some surcease. The two Koreas are negotiating in slow motion. U.S.-Indian relations are definitely better and Mrs. Gandhi says with apparent sincerity she wants to help Pakistan survive.

New leaders — or old ones speaking with new voices — start featuring the Asian scene. Tanaka is groping for the first independent foreign policy Japan has attempted since World War II. Australia's Prime Minister Whitlam wants to link his continent-country more closely to non-aligned Asia.

Mrs. Gandhi, tempted by destiny a year ago with the giddiness of success, avoided possible delusions of grandeur. Anyway, she is now preoccupied with stubborn international problems like economic growth and enough to eat.

The only thing that hasn't changed is Palestine. The peripheral states are more exercised than ever. Guerrilla and terrorist movements are most dangerous. For the nonce, Israel is more strong. And the industrialized West, scared silly of seeing its petroleum choked off, is even more scared.

ON TARGET

The greatest show in town returns to action today. The unpredictable Nebraska Legislature is back after a week's recess during which senators presumably had an opportunity to listen to their neighbors and constituents at home.

After that wild week — they call it four days in April — in which lawmakers railroaded Governor Exon's operational budget bill to enactment on a fast express, anything could happen.

And don't forget that the governor has vetoed Terry Carpenter's Hiram Scott bill since the Legislature last met. Carpenter is not likely to forget.

So here they come back into session, relaxed, rested, ready for the final 18 days or so.

One issue which remains unresolved is the second part of the governor's budget — his capital construction recommendations for the coming fiscal year. And therein lies a potential new legislative drama.

Exon has proposed $18 million in new construction; but the Legislature is currently operating under a policy which says it will not consider a budget bill for new capital improvements.

Now, since the Legislature's earlier budget action was designed to trap the governor in a budget and tax squeeze, it could tighten the noose even more by approving Exon's capital construction budget.

Then the governor would have less room to maneuver between his budget and the prospects for 1974 tax reductions which he mentioned to senators on that Monday when the place went up for grabs.

Okay, so you see, those

Don Walton
Exon Budget
Bill

senators who want Exon's hide should now go ahead and give him his capital construction budget.

So, why don't they? Ah, there is the rub.

The governor's construction budget contains no funds — not one penny — for the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

And if (I think it really will be "when") Exon's capital improvements bill hits the floor, this whole elaborate scheme to bind the governor is likely to go up in smoke as Omaha senators take a new look at the budget plot in light of UNO needs.

If Omaha senators stick to the earlier design of giving Exon what he asked and then demanding tax reductions, they will have to ignore the needs of UNO.

The question will become: Can they really vote for a construction bill which provides not one cent for the university in their home town?

The answer is probably no.

Exon's bill also does not contain new state matching funds required to keep a $2 million federal grant for construction of a new College of Nursing at the Medical Center in Omaha. Can Omaha senators (and other lawmakers too) ignore that request?

The fact is that it will be very difficult to hold the budget scheme together if the construction bill reaches the floor.

Additions to the bill would move appropriations beyond the governor's recommendations, break the fragile budget-tax "trap" which some senators think they have constructed around Exon and perhaps open the way for other additional spending bills.

The capital construction bill in effect, has the potential of blowing apart all the elaborate trappings of the four days in April. It could be the key to a new political shootout in the Legislature.

Credit goes to Richard Nixon. Lo these many years, politicians have gone before the voters and promised to operate government like a business.

Candidates have stressed their experience in business affairs, their cost consciousness, their dedication to frugality, their concern with quality control and efficiency.

No one has successfully suggested that government should not be operated as a business on the grounds that the primary goal of business is to make a profit while the chief goal of government is to provide service. Rather the cry has been a businesslike government.

Many politicians have succeeded in striving for that goal, providing a government more concerned with costs than service, more attuned to frugality than needs.

But the President succeeded where others have failed.

With the wise use of men from the world of advertising and public relations and men who succeeded in the board rooms and competitive councils of big business, he brought corporate morality to the White House.

Letters To The Editor

Brevity in letters is requested but length in itself will have no bearing on publication. Writers are advised that needlessly detailed and repetitious matter will be edited out of letters. Too frequent contributions from one person on the same subject may be rejected. All letters must be accompanied by the writer's true name and may be submitted for publication under a pen name or initials. However, letters will be printed under a pen name or initials at the editor's discretion.

Rock Concerts

Lincoln, Neb.
I would like to comment on the letter in the April 25 Star "Just Reminding."

The writer has lost the whole point of a newspaper. A newspaper is to report the news about topics which are controversial. Alice Cooper was controversial and thus deserved his story on the front page.

Being a college student, I was very pleased that there was an article about him. One very bad aspect of the Lincoln papers is their lack of comment and reviews about rock groups which come to town. How can the papers ignore something which thousands of people go to? What's even worse are the times when they do write a paragraph or two about them. It is almost always saying things like: "Ten Arrested at Rock Concert" — which creates a bad image of concerts. These people who are arrested are a few, maybe out of 8,000, but even if it were 10 out of 1,000, it is still a big minority. When a brief review is written, it seems to be by someone who doesn't care for rock music too much.

Thus when I see a letter such as "Just Reminding" and other efforts at creating a bad image, poor reviews, etc., I get angry at those who want articles only about things they enjoy.

The paper should get someone young who knows and understands rock music, to write reviews so a large part of the population in Lincoln will not be neglected any more.

BRUCE ANDERSON

John Robinson

Lincoln, Neb.
In the last few years, neighborhood associations have developed in many parts of Lincoln. More than ever, Lincoln citizens are concerned with what is happening in their neighborhoods and in the rest of the community.

For the first time there is a candidate running for City Council who really cares about neighborhood preservation and improvement and who supports greater citizen participation.

That candidate is John Robinson.

DAVID LITREL
DAVID MEYER

Sue Bailey

Lincoln, Neb.
Sue Bailey deserved to attain the highest vote for City Council in the primary election. Those of us who continue to believe that she is "tops" must vote for her again in the coming election. We must be joined by many of our fellow citizens who had not voted for her in the primaries or who had stayed at home.

In her many years of volunteer work in civic and religious organizations in our community Sue has shown both warm feeling of concern and keen intelligence in problem-solving. Yard Signs

Lincoln, Neb.
At one of the meetings in the primary campaign, I met Mr. Max Denney, a candidate for our City Council.

I asked Mr. Denney whether or not he was going to use yard signs in his campaign and I was so pleased to hear his answer — that springtime in Lincoln is a beautiful time and he was not going to be a part of detracting from this.

I wish other candidates were as concerned about Lincoln and its beauty as Mr. Denney.

Yard signs for political campaigns are outdated and ugly.

Milk Prices

Lincoln, Neb.
Why can't people realize that much of the high cost of everything is not the fault of the farmer, the merchant, the "middle man" — but the administration in Washington. Two years ago the milk producers' association was told there could not be a raise in the price for wholesale milk. They had a convention in Chicago and Nixon flew there and met with a dozen or so members. For a political contribution of only $322,500, within a week the wholesale milk went up 27 cents a hundred pounds. This cost the taxpayers, the consumers, $500 million and the contribution was deposited in one of the many Republican bank accounts controlled by Mr. Stans and others of the Committee to Re-elect the President.

We will never know how many more schemes like this were perpetrated on the people for other commodities. When will the people wake up.

Stand On Issues

Lincoln, Neb.
The Arnold Heights Property Owners Association was formed earlier this year as a forum for those residents interested in taking an active part in the affairs of their community. At its last meeting, the members of the association felt it necessary to publicly voice their feelings on the three amendments to the City Charter that will appear on the upcoming ballot.

The Arnold Heights Property Owners Association wishes to go on public record as follows:

AGAINST the amendment relating to major highway construction projects.

AGAINST the amendment relating to the election of members of the City Council by district.

FOR the amendment relating to salary increases for members of the City Council.

Since the Arnold Heights Property Owners Association represents one of the most recent additions to the City of Lincoln, we feel it mandatory that we take a stand on issues relating to the total city and will continue to do so as the issues surface.

Narcotics Agents Smash Into, Tear Apart Wrong Houses

COLLINSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Herbert Giglotto, 29, and his wife, Louise, 28, had gone to bed at about 8 p.m.

"At about 9:30 we hear this crash. We hear this screaming. I take about three steps out of my bed and I see these hippies with guns," Giglotto recalled Sunday. "I told my wife, 'My God, we're dead.'"

Across town at another home, Donald Askew, 40, had just sat down to dinner with his wife, Virginia, 37, and their 16-year-old son, Michael. He looked out the window, he remembered, and saw several armed men in the yard.

Seconds later, he said, the men were at the door, trying to kick it in. Askew called to his wife to phone the police. She fainted. Askew told his son to run for his life.

The armed men who forced their way into the Askew and Giglotto homes last Monday were conducting narcotics raids. They came on the raids with no warrants and apparently no warning. They left when the raids turned out to be a mistake.

Nyles J. Ambrose, director of the federal Drug Abuse Enforcement Program and a special assistant attorney general, said Sunday it is his "understanding" that the men were agents from the program's St. Louis office.

Paul Cigliana, Collinsville police chief, confirmed that the raids were conducted by a "strike force" of federal narcotics agents from the St. Louis office.

Cigliana said he believed that policemen from some municipal police forces in the area also participated, but he added, "I don't think there were too many of them."

Cigliana said no policemen from his department were involved. A spokesman from the Madison County sheriff's office said, "As far as I know there was no cooperation from this department."

Federal narcotics officials from the St. Louis office could not be reached Sunday, but had declined comment earlier. Askew said the men gave him the telephone number of the office to verify their identities.

Two days after the raids, Ambrose issued a statement: "I have directed an inspection team to thoroughly investigate this matter. If any federal agents have acted improperly, appropriate action will be taken. Under no circumstances will I permit my agents to violate anyone's constitutional rights."

Contacted at his Chevy Chase, Md., home, Ambrose said Sunday, "The investigation is being conducted. When I have all the facts I will take appropriate action."

Ambrose, asked whether the GIGLOTTO ... clean up after apartment raided.

investigation is top priority, said, "You bet your sweet life it is."

Before the raiders left without apologies, Giglotto said he and his wife had been threatened, bound, insulted and their apartment left in shambles.

Three weeks before, his complaints about two young men in the next apartment had caused their eviction. The two men were suspected of dealing in drugs and Giglotto said he was outraged.

His first thought, he said in an interview Sunday, was that the young men had come back to settle the score.

"I've never had anything to do with narcotics," Giglotto, a boilermaker, said. "I hate it. I've never had anything to do with drugs and my wife never has."

The men did not identify themselves, he said, and showed no warrant. "They knocked me down across the bed and handcuffed me and my wife. They had our hands behind our backs. I was in my underwear and she was in her negligee."

"One agent," Giglotto said, held a cocked pistol to his head and said, "You're a dead man. I'm going to kill you, you son of a bitch." The man, Giglotto said, called his wife a bitch and, not knowing they were married, suggested she was an adulteress.

"Just shut your mouth or I'll kill you," Giglotto quoted the man as saying after he was asked to identify himself. The man reportedly told Mrs. Giglotto he would kill her husband if he did not tell her where the drugs they sought were hidden.

With 15 raiders in the room and more downstairs, Giglotto said his wife was pleading for his life. Giglotto asked, "Please look at my identification before you kill me."

None did, he said. He added the only identification the Giglottos were shown was a gold badge flashed by one of the intruders. Only Mrs. Giglotto caught a glimpse of it.

As they lay trussed across the bed, Giglotto said, another raider walked up the stairs and announced, "Oh, I think we made a mistake."

They had torn the house apart and found nothing. The front room was a shambles, littered with books, overturned furniture and a smashed television set. Released from his handcuffs, Giglotto tried to put on his pants, he said, but a raider ripped them out of his hands.

"They were as rude leaving as they were coming," Giglotto said. He said he followed them downstairs, demanding an explanation, shouting: "My God, you just kicked in my door, threatened to kill me and my wife, can you tell me what's happening?"

Giglotto said one of the armed men turned and replied, "Shut your mouth, boy."

Askew said the raid on his home began as they were beginning a late dinner after he had stayed overtime at the service station he runs in East St. Louis.

Askew thought his son had been in a fight with some other teenagers and the men he saw in the yard were coming to kill him.

As he held the front door, Askew said Sunday, two men knocked down the back door and levelled two riot guns at him. A man at the front door flashed a gold badge and Askew let them in.

Five men, all dressed as hippies, searched the house, looking for a suspect, Askew said.

Askew said they showed no warrant. Askew asked to see a badge again. A man who gave his name as Ted Williams flashed his, Askew said, but all he could read was "special agent" before the badge was put away.

Mrs. Askew, lying on the couch, revived. She saw the men with the guns and fainted again. When she revived again one of the raiders told her, "Take it easy, lady. We're really federal officers."

Askew said the men were polite. "Outside of kicking the door and scaring the ——— out of us, they were all right."

Satisfied the men they sought was not in the Askew home, one of the intruders said, "We just got a wrong tip." The men refused, however, to let Mrs. Askew call the police, and showed no other identification.

Askew said he asked the men to remain at the house while he tried to learn if they really were federal agents. He said the leader of the group told him, "No. I can't. I got four other places to go."

Askew said none of his family has ever had anything to do with narcotics. "The only way I knew to get drugs is at the drug store," he said.

The Askews have filed a $100,000 damage suit in U.S. District Court at Springfield. The Giglottos were to meet with their lawyer Monday morning to determine what course to take.

Israel Asks Release Of Iraqi Jews

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel accused the Baghdad government Sunday of kidnapping and murdering Iraqi Jews, and urged the world to put pressure on Iraq for the release of the 400 to 700 Jews still living there.

Foreign Minister Abba Eban claimed in parliament that the Iraqis had kidnapped 16 Jews from their homes, and that some were dead.

He said the atmosphere in Iraq now resembles that which prevailed shortly before nine Jews were publicly hanged in Baghdad four years ago on charges they spied for Israel and the United States.

The Knesset — parliament — met to discuss reports from Iraq that the authorities recently shot dead all five members of a family in Baghdad. Eban said the reports appeared to be true.

The Knesset passed a resolution saying "The immediate and total migration of the Jewish community of Iraq is a pressing humanitarian requirement."

The resolution called on world governments, parliaments and public groups to put pressure on Baghdad for the release of the Jews. Only the Moscow-oriented Rakah Communist party abstained in the vote.

Jordan Valley Site Of Project

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A $100-million plan to settle 90,000 people in the Jordan valley — Israel's longest cease-fire line — will start next month with a pilot housing project, senior Jordanian officials announced Sunday.

The $200,000-pilot project will be financed jointly by the Jordanian government and a U.S. A.I.D. grant, said Omar Abdullah, director general of the Jordan Valley Commission. It will be built at Damia, the site of a village completely destroyed in the 1967 war, he said.

It is one of about 30 sites to be built in the east bank of the valley under a three-year development plan.

U.S. A.I.D. is loaning $10 million toward the total project, which includes dam construction and irrigation plans.

Fighting Recedes In South Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Fighting ebbed across South Vietnam on Sunday as the Saigon regime and the Viet Cong prepared for another round of civilian prisoner exchanges and the international truce force began a new investigation of the fatal April 7 crash of one of its helicopters.

In neighboring Cambodia, insurgent forces maintained their pressure around the capital city of Phnom Penh. President Lon Nol announced that he will head the newly created four-man political council designed to calm criticism from his opponents and allies that Cambodia is under one-man rule.

The Saigon command reported 74 cease-fire violations across Vietnam during the 24-hour period ended at 6 a. m. Sunday, the second lowest number since the truce went into effect three months ago.

Most of the alleged violations appeared to be small infantry attacks, shelling and terrorism. As in the past, most of the reported shelling attacks were concentrated at government positions on the western flanks of the northern city of Hue.

The Saigon command announced it will release another 400 civilian prisoners to the Viet Cong at Loc Ninh 75 miles north of Saigon on Monday. The Saigon government is scheduled to receive 294 of its civilian prisoners in Binh Dinh Province on the central coast and 28 at Quang Tri to the far north.

Sources said those prisoners being released to the Viet Cong on Monday probably will include two of the best known. They are Tran Ngoc Chau and his brother, Tran Ngoc Hien.

Chau, a former national deputy and publisher of a Saigon newspaper, was convicted in 1969 of having dealings with his brother, who had been sentenced previously to life in prison as an undercover agent for the Communist side. Chau was tried twice before being convicted and sentenced to 20 years.

The first phase of the civilian prisoner exchange began Saturday. The Saigon government released 100 and received 63 in return. The exchange of civilian prisoners had been delayed since the cease-fire went into effect Jan. 28 in a dispute over the number each side holds. Under terms of the peace agreement, it was to have been completed Friday, but now the target date is still uncertain.

The civilian prisoner issue has become an international controversy and has cast the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu in the eyes of many as an oppressive regime.

The Saigon government says it holds only a little more than 5,000 civilians. It has frequently denied they are political prisoners despite evidence to the contrary.

The Viet Cong maintain as many as 200,000 political prisoners are detained by the Saigon government in jails across the country.

The Saigon government has maintained that the Viet Cong are holding up to 60,000 civilian prisoners including civil servants, cadres and teachers. The Viet Cong have turned over a list of fewer than 1,000 names.

For the reinvestigation of the fatal helicopter crash that killed nine persons, including two American civilian pilots, a 19-man team moved into Communist territory by road to re-examine the site and dismantle a second helicopter that made a forced landing during the same incident. The team included one of two American civilian pilots who survived in the second helicopter. Both were carrying members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision.

Rep. Hungate Says Independent Pharmacists Facing Extinction

By SHELLY KALKOWSKI
Star Staff Writer

Third party intervention, including insurance company demands, is threatening the life of small, independent pharmacists, according to William L. Hungate, 9th District congressman from Missouri.

Hungate, a member of the select committee on small businesses, was a featured speaker Sunday during the 90th annual convention of the Nebraska Pharmaceutical Association. Nearly 100 association members were present for his speech during windup events for the three-day convention.

Hungate described the independent pharmacy of his youth as a social center where the soda fountain played an important role. In contrast, he said the independent pharmacy of today is a victim of social ills.

"Today the store is a target for drug addicts, often, the owner can not get insurance, or purchase a large quantity of drugs," Hungate said. "The independent pharmacist does not have the tax loopholes the chain distributors have and may not be able to stock the variety of goods found in these stores."

Hungate also said insurance companies can dictate the fee to be received for a prescription as well as the quantity of drugs an independent store can handle. He added that 60 to 80% of prescriptions will be filled through prepaid organizations in the near future.

According to Hungate, these changing conditions will result in independent pharmacists either losing money or customers.

Hungate said he thinks small businesses, including independent pharmacies, are a vital part of our economy, and antitrust laws should be a protection to the small businesses.

"But antitrust laws are now being applied in a way harmful to independent pharmacists," Hungate said. He said the laws are preventing the small businessmen from gaining collective bargaining power.

The select committee on small businesses has been studying the feasibility of negotiation guidelines, Hungate said. He added that proposed guidelines were presented to the Federal Trade Commission which refused to take action.

Hungate also urged independent pharmacists to keep their congressmen, senators and the committee on small businesses informed of further complaints so preparations can be made for future hearings.

Earlier in the convention, Nebraska Pharmaceutical Association members elected G. Richard Myers, R.P., of Chadron as president and William J. Carroll, R.P., of Nebraska City as president-elect. Myers succeeds T. R. Klintworth of Seward.

Other officers elected include: Warren I. Anderson, R.P., of Lincoln, treasurer; Ronald D. Stuhmer, R.P., of McCook; Kenneth Boeding, R.P., of Hastings; Jack Stewart, R.P., of Hebron; Mrs. Mary Jo Cerny, R.P., of Lincoln; Dan Burns, R.P., of Omaha; Wallace J. Langdon Jr., R.P., of Omaha and Warren I. Anderson, R.P., board of directors.

Six of 17 members who received their pharmacy licenses in 1923 and continued to maintain the licenses celebrated their golden anniversary. They are W. D. Hads, R.P., of Holly, Colo.; Arthur W. Jensen, R.P., of Omaha; Donald S. McPherson, R.P., of West Point; Mrs. Helen Dryden Shaw, R.P., of McCook; David Slobodesky, R.P., of San Pedro, Calif.; and Paul L. Thompson, R.P., of Springfield, Ohio.

Norman A. Leuthauser, R.P., of Lincoln was named the 1973 recipient of the A. H. Robins "Bowl of Hygieia" award for outstanding community service.

Agnew: He'd 'Run To Win'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Sunday that if he goes into the 1976 presidential race "I'll run to win, and I can win."

But the former Maryland governor reiterated in a copyrighted interview with U.S. News and World Report that he has not yet decided to run.

"I think that if I go into this race, if I decide to do it, I'll run to win and I can win," Agnew said. "The fact that I have been in a fairly constant position with a broad cross section of the public makes me think that I have sufficient personal popularity to carry an election if I would go into one."

Agnew said other likely contenders for the Republican presidential nomination were Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois and former Texas Gov. John Connally, who currently is a Democrat.

Agnew said he wouldn't say it's impossible for Connally to capture the presidential nomination but "it's not going to be a cakewalk for him because—and I'm not simply speaking of myself—there are other people that have been struggling in the vineyards of the Republican party for a long time, such as Nelson Rockefeller and Ronald Reagan, who may have some desire for the nomination themselves, and it's going to take a little doing for Connally to move into another party and capture the presidential nomination."

Agnew said his present job had the disadvantage of his "having to be considered as a potential candidate. He also said it forced him to keep his opinions to himself when his positions were not the same as those adopted by the President.

"Once the President has made a determination on the administration policy, I feel constrained not to actively support or speak for a different position because this gives rise to a speculation that there is discord within the administration," he said.

"As we move closer to the end of the second term, I suspect I'll be faced with some very delicate problems about how to be my own man, if I should determine that I were a candidate for president—which I haven't done yet, I hasten to emphasize.

The vice president denied he was altering his approach to politics, saying he expected to serve as the "cutting edge" for his party in future campaigns.

VOTE AGAINST CHARTER AMENDMENT NO. 2 MAY 1

All former mayors and council members now in the city oppose Charter Amendment Number 2 for these reasons which are vitally important to you:

1. The amendment will cost taxpayers thousands of dollars in unnecessary expenditures because of legal complications from putting two sets of street construction regulations into the City Charter.
2. The amendment gives veto power to any one councilman, authority now held only by the mayor.
3. The amendment will delay improvement of some streets—already full of chuckholes and scheduled for work this summer. 70th street, south from O is an example.
4. The amendment would write into the City Charter—Lincoln's Constitution—regulations on improving, constructing, and maintaining city streets which cannot be changed to meet public needs except by a vote of the people.

Remember, passage of Charter Amendment Number 2 does not stop construction of the Northeast Radial.

State 4-H Clubs Seek Membership Increase

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

A major drive has been launched to increase the enrollment of Nebraska's 4-H clubs by 10%. An important part of the program is the establishment of a new position in county extension offices throughout the state.

The new, sub-professional job of extension 4-H aide does not require a degree, but it does require a willingness to work hard and it sure helps if they like to work with youngsters.

The state has 10 1/2 persons involved in the effort. The half comes from a number of full-time or part-time people.

Lancaster County has two full-time and two half-time 4-H aides. Other counties involved include Box Butte, Cheyenne, Lincoln, Red Willow, Madison, Buffalo, Hall, Phelps, Dodge, Douglas, Gage, Platte, Sarpy and Washington. The effort is aimed primarily at city youngsters who are not usually thought of as 4-H members.

Parents Worried
"A lot of kids don't know you can join 4-H if you don't have livestock. Parents are worried about being leaders. There is a lot of help available and it is all free. We even have roller skating and fishing as projects," explained Gloria Fisher, one of the aides in the Lancaster County office.

Lorene Bartos, Bruce Treffew and John Wilson make up the rest of the Lancaster team. The girls are home economists and the boys are college sophomores who work part-time.

"The whole deal is to increase 4-H enrollment by 4,200 in the state," Treffer explained. "In the county we need 281 new members to make the goal."

June Deadline
Cyril Bish, county agent, said he thinks the four will reach that goal by the June deadline.

"In just two weeks they have met with 14 different groups and contacted about 500 people," he said. They have at least nine new clubs started and have several others in various stages of development.

Bish said he would like to see more boys in 4-H.
"We have 2,150 girls but only 653 boys in county 4-H clubs. We have started some extra work in the area of plant science which we hope will interest boys," he said.

The activities of the aides seem endless. They hold many night meetings with clubs and prospective club members. "We don't get supper for husbands much," Mrs. Bartos said.

While the young home economists' husbands are home warming up TV dinners, their wives are discussing 4-H camp, conducting paper drives or collecting coupons to raise money for 4-H camps, talking to prospective 4-H members, parents, ladies' groups, PTAs and anyone else who will listen about 4-H.

Materials Are Free
"If you can get just one mother who really wants her youngster in 4-H, you can generally get a club started," Mrs. Fisher said. "The real problem is getting more adults involved. They don't seem to know that we will be around to help them and all the materials are free."

"Some ask if you have to wear a uniform. (You don't, but there are 4-H T-shirts available if you want them.) Will we come out to a home in the evening? (Yes.) Can I take guns? (ask your club leader. If he doesn't know, we will find out.) And a lot more questions like that," she said.

"The big need is for more leaders," Treffer added. "You don't have to be a parent to be a leader. A lot of parents feel that since they work they can't be a leader, but some of the best are people who work and are involved in several organizations."

"We will give them all the material and help they need if they have an interest in working with young people," he said.

One fringe benefit that extension leaders hope to get from the program is an input of new blood into the extension service.

"I think some of this group will eventually make good extension agents," Bish said. We hope they will remain interested in a career in this field."

In the meantime, all 10 1/2 young people are working hard to bring 4-H to city kids.

Richest Farmers Still Get Lion's Share Of Subsidies

Washington (AP) — Only 7 per cent of the benefits from the government's farm commodity programs go to the poorest 41 per cent of U.S. farms, while the richest 7 per cent get 32 per cent of the benefits, a study prepared for the Congress Joint Economic Committee says.

The Senate-House committee published a collection of such studies Sunday, without expressing an opinion on them.

The distribution of price support and similar benefits was discussed in a paper by Russell Lidman of the Institute for Research on Poverty, University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Citing the estimate of a presidential commission that closing the income gap for the country's rural poor would cost nearly $5 billion, Lidman said the farm programs cost the public $5.25 billion and "at the very most, contributed to closing this gap by 10 per cent."

In a paper reviewing agricultural subsidies generally, John Schmittler, a former undersecretary of agriculture and now a Washington economic consultant, concluded that "federal farm stabilization actions are legitimate and have been generally effective," because "important parts of the farm economy are inherently unstable." But he criticized some aspects of the programs and suggested a number of legislative changes.

"Total payments to wheat growers have been at least 50 per cent larger in most recent years than would have been required to keep production in line with requirements," he said.

Schmittler recommended eliminating the present $1.25 bushel minimum on wheat and reducing payments, but maintaining flexibility to allow larger outlays in years of serious surplus.

Schmittler said the $55,000 individual limitation on farm payments has been ineffective in reducing federal outlays. Any reduction of the limit, he said, would have to be accompanied by stringent rules against splitting farms to circumvent the maximum requirement.

19 Jailed With Food For Indians

Valentine (AP) — Nineteen young persons from Fort Collins, Colo., were in jail here Sunday after officers said they were caught trying to take food supplies to Indians at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The 11 males and eight females were held in Cherry County Jail pending the filing of charges by federal authorities. The State Patrol said food was found in the three vehicles they were riding in.

Officers said the Cherry County sheriff's office was alerted Saturday night that seven cars of young people were believed headed for Wounded Knee, scene of an Indian siege. Officers said four of the cars apparently got through a road block before notification was received. Officers then halted the remaining three cars.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

There are more uncertainties around this spring than at any time in history and the weather isn't helping any.

Many farmers are still struggling with harvesting last year's crop, while others are trying to get some fertilizer spread so they can start working ground for corn planting.

Actually, farmers have managed to do a lot of work in spite of trying conditions in many parts of the state and nation.

Weather isn't helping fuel or grain transportation problems, either.

The floods on the Mississippi and other rivers are making barge movement of grain downstream and fuel supplies upstream extremely difficult, if not impossible.

There are reports of shortages of fuel to run the tow boats that push the barges. Once the river settles down, the demand for fuel will be tremendous.

The same thing will be true of the fuel needs of farmers if the entire nation should have favorable weather at the same time. The disappearance of gasoline and diesel fuel will be beyond belief when farmers start running 24 hours a day, which they will have to do if they are going to get the crops in.

The ban on the use of Diethylstilbestrol or DES has now been extended to the implants used in steers' ears.

This puts the feeder in a bad spot. There is a lid on his income due to the price ceiling and no lid on his expense. The ban will add several million dollars to the nation's livestock feed bill, which will either result in a higher price for meat or a lower supply. Possibly we will get both at the same time.

The ban will help grain farmers. It will take about 500 extra pounds of feed for every steer that goes to market.

You might not believe it, but the ban on DES could contribute to the price you pay for gasoline. If the nation needs more grain in U.S. feedlots, it can't export the grain to pay for the gasoline it must import.

A major packer is reported to have shipped his entire week's meat production to Japan during the meat boycott. It seems to indicate the price of meat will remain quite high because, if the domestic demand slackens much, the Japanese and others who pay much higher prices for meat will take up the surplus meat.

American fertilizer manufacturers are selling fertilizer to Russia at prices well above those in the United States.

Price controls contribute to a lack of supply when the price outside of the controlled area is higher or when they force the producer to produce at a loss. As long as the producer can find a market at a price high enough to cover his expenses, he will continue to produce.

Ban exports and place a ceiling price on his product that is too low for him to make a profit and he will eventually be forced to cease production, perhaps, for the black market.

Boycotts are a bad deal all the way around. The meat boycott has caused many farmers to halt expansion plans which would lead to lower priced meat.

It has also caused many farmers to delay or drop plans to purchase new equipment. Carry this foolishness far enough and you could trigger a depression.

Farmers have been fighting back with efforts of their own. By taking city girls who lead boycotts strolling in muddy hog lots for the benefit of city photographers they have done much to entertain other farmers who watch television news, but little to solve the farm-city communication gap.

Other farmers have ganged up on stores, buying every piece of meat in the place. This proves that meat is available to farmers and that they can afford it but it doesn't do anything to convince housewives they ought to buy more meat.

I would like to see farmers organize a statewide "Sell a Mother Animal Day." If thousands of farmers took a cow, a ewe or a sow to Omaha the same day it would get the point across to city folks that farmers will cut back on livestock production if prices drop.

It would also use some pens at the stockyards that haven't felt a hoof in many years.

It would have to be done in Omaha where the action would be highly visible to the city newspaper and television people.

If some articulate farmers could be on hand to explain that when mother animals are sold for meat there are no new animals available to produce meat, they ought to get the message.

Only One To Be Crowned

Students at Western Nebraska Technical College in Sidney have chosen these four coeds as finalists for the title of Sweetheart Ball Queen. They are Sandra Merrihew of Ashby, left in back row, Diane Carlson of Potter, Pamela Berry of Gurley, left front, and Valerie Peterson of Gurley. The winner will be crowned Friday at the annual ball.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The Republic of China (Nationalist) has signed a three-year agreement to buy $800 million of wheat, soybeans and feed grains from the United States.

This is one of the first long-term agreements that may prove to be a really desirable side effect of the Russian grain sale. If we can get long-term agreements to buy grain with our customers around the world, there will be incentive to expand production of grain and improve the nation's ability to deliver the grain to expanded export facilities.

There is every reason to believe Russia will be in the world market buying large quantities of soybeans, feed grains and wheat in the next 18 months.

India, which has also had its problems with food production in the past, was the scene of food riots this past week. More can be expected unless the Indian government faces up to the problem and deals with it effectively.

The corn supply is dwindling at a surprising rate, apparently due to excessive feed use during the worst winter in many years. This argues for a strong price, even into harvest time, particularly if expected export interest develops.

The world population is still growing rapidly and the income of many nations has increased the demand for more and better food, including more meat. It is doubtful if world feed grain production will expand enough to depress prices soon.

Psychiatrist Claims . . .

File On Ellsberg Was 'Ransacked'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist has confirmed that his office was broken into in the summer of 1971 and files including those on Ellsberg were ransacked, a spokesman for Ellsberg said Sunday.

The report came in connection with statements at the Pentagon papers trial Friday that Watergate conspirators E. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy may have burglarized the psychiatrist's office to get Ellsberg's psychiatric records.

Still declining to identify the psychiatrist by name, Ellsberg's spokesman, Robert Sachs, said the defense team will file a sworn affidavit with the judge in the trial Monday morning. He said the affidavit, based on the information from the doctor, will tell the judge about the break-in.

The doctor told Ellsberg that in the summer of 1971 he found someone had entered his office and forced open file cabinets, including some which contained Ellsberg's records, the spokesman said. The doctor reported that some files were thrown around the office, but that nothing appeared to have been taken.

"We have no way of knowing what might have been copied," said Sachs.

He said that attorneys for Ellsberg and codefendant Anthony Russo were meeting Sunday to decide what motions they will file with the court on Monday. Sachs added they were seriously considering another motion to dismiss the indictment on espionage, conspiracy and theft charges.

Previous motions for dismissal have been denied, and Ellsberg has said he doesn't want to move for a mistrial because of the possibility the government could try him and Russo again.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Matt Byrne warned parties in the case Friday that if the Liddy-Hunt theft occurred, it could indicate a "taint of evidence" in the four-month old trial. He has launched an investigation to find out whether government prosecutors might have been given the psychiatric records and whether they were used in any way in prosecuting the defendants.

Ellsberg, 42, and Russo, 36, both former researchers on government projects, are on trial for copying the top secret Pentagon study of the Vietnam war. The trial, which began last January, is in the stage of government rebuttal, but attorneys said Sunday it was likely that further testimony by government witnesses might be delayed Monday morning.

Government Said 'Losing Patience' ... With Militant Indians

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — An anticipated meeting between the government's chief negotiator and leaders of Indian militants occupying Wounded Knee failed to come off Sunday, and a federal spokesman said the government is losing patience with the insurgents.

In an effort to head off a run-in, Frizzell said, he suggested Sunday that Clearwater be buried on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, east of Pine Ridge. He said Crow Dog, a Rosebud resident, has offered to allow Clearwater to be buried in his family's plot.

Frizzell added, "It is very difficult to resume meaningful negotiations while you have two deceased persons whose funerals haven't been scheduled or burials completed, and both are potentially volatile situations."

He said even if the tribe permits Clearwater or Lawrence LaMont, the other militant killed during the siege, to be buried in Wounded Knee, the government would not allow a large funeral procession to wind its way into the village.

He said only immediate members of the families would be permitted to attend the funerals. It is considered unlikely that tribal authorities will allow either burial to occur at Wounded Knee.

Frizzell said he hoped to meet with the AIM leaders Monday afternoon to resume negotiations in the 63-day siege.

He said he believes that if a negotiated settlement isn't obtained in the near future, the government will be forced to conclude that the occupation force isn't interested in a peaceful resolution of the armed stalemate.

"Once that takes place," Frizzell said, "I think the government will be required to take a look at the harder choices."

At the same time, Oglala Sioux authorities were bracing themselves for a possible confrontation Monday with an American Indian Movement force. The militant group said it will bring the body of one of its slain members to Wounded Knee for burial, despite a tribal court order prohibiting the burial.

The two sides talked for nearly two hours Saturday, the first negotiations in more than three weeks. Government and AIM representatives have not held serious talks to end the siege since the signing of an April 5 peace agreement, which has not been implemented.

Frizzell did meet for an hour Sunday with traditional Oglala Sioux chiefs and headmen at the home of Frank Fools Crow near Kyle, north of Wounded Knee on the Pine Ridge Reservation.

Frizzell said he discussed the same things with the Oglala leaders that he had covered with

Attorneys Criticized For 'Murder' Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid growing criticism of his office, acting Dist. Atty. Frederick Ludwig on Sunday conceded that an assistant acted hastily in charging a patrolman with the killing of a 10-year-old boy.

Ludwig told 60 demonstrators from the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association picketing outside the Queens courthouse that the case should have been presented to a grand jury before any arrest was made.

Two hours earlier the patrolman, Thomas Shea, was released in $25,000 bail after spending the night in the House of Detention on a charge of homicide in the killing of Clifford Glover.

Both the PBA and new police commissioner, Donald Cawley, were sharply critical of procedures in the case and of Asst. Dist. Atty. Martin Bracken's characterization of the killing as "murder."

Ludwig told the PBA demonstrators that he would move Monday or Tuesday to exonerate the bail and have Shea released in his own recognizance.

He said he would present the grand jury a charge of criminally negligent homicide against Shea, for which the maximum penalty is four years imprisonment.

"The grand jury will decide if he is to be tried for this crime or not," Ludwig said.

Shea and his partner, Walter Scott, were on a plainclothes anti-crime patrol at about 5 a.m. Saturday, investigating the robbery of a taxi driver the previous midnight.

They stopped the Glover boy and his stepfather, Add Armstead, outside the entrance to an auto wrecking yard, where Armstead works, to question them.

Shea told his superiors that the two ran and he fired three shots after the boy had pointed a gun at him. After being hit, the boy gave the gun to Armstead who threw it in a wooded lot, Shea reported.

Four Evangelical Baptists Are Imprisoned In Russia

MOSCOW (AP) - A Byelorussian people's court has imprisoned four Evangelical Baptists in a wide-ranging crackdown on small religious groups.

Other victims in recent months have been a Buddhist scholar who had followers from the Mongolian border to the Baltic and an underground group of Jehovah's Witnesses in Lithuania, Latvia and northwestern Russia.

The sentencing of the Baptists to varying terms of imprisonment was reported in the Friday issue of Sovetskaya Byelorussia. It reached Moscow Sunday from the Byelorussian capital of Minsk.

The paper, organ of the Soviet Republic's Communist party, named the two men and two women sentenced as Yevgeny Silchukov, Ivan Trukhan, Lidya Korzhanevskaya and Nina Maslyuk. It said their trial was held recently in the town of Soligorsk but gave no dates.

All were members of a Baptist splinter group called the "Initiativniki" (Initiativists), which split in 1961 from the official church leadership, the All-Union Council of Evangelical Christians and Baptists.

The reform group said church leaders had betrayed the faith by allowing state authorities to exercise full control over the church and its activities.

The four Byelorussian Initiativists were accused at their trial of not registering their congregations with the authorities, giving religious instruction to minors and "forcing" them to attend services, and urging disobedience of Soviet laws.

Sovetskaya Byelorussia said the four preached "the sinful character and depravity of Soviet reality and hurled mud at everything created by the Soviet people."

The charges were almost identical to those against nine Jehovah's Witnesses sent to labor camps earlier this month after a trial in the Lithuanian port city of Klaipeda.

They were also similar to the accusations made by the state against the Buddhist scholar, Bidya Dandaron. He got five years in a labor camp after a December trial in the south Siberian city of Ulan Ude.

Dandaron, 58, was accused of forming Buddhist sects in Ulan Ude, Leningrad, and the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius. The prosecution said the sects performed ritual sacrifices, engaged in "sexual mysticism," and beat up people who left the groups.

The state also alleged Dandaron corrupted young people and preached "a cult of violence" and his own idolization as a demigod.

Friends of Dandaron called the charges absurd and said he had primarily an academic interest in Buddhism and the Sanskrit language. He taught those subjects at an Ulan Ude institute under the Siberian branch of the Academy of Sciences.

Four associates of Dandaron were declared insane and incarcerated. Seven others, mostly teachers, lost their jobs. Another was expelled from graduate study at Leningrad State University.

On Friday, the Central Trade Union Newspaper, Trud, said Dandaron is depicted in the West as a martyr for his convictions but that he was really a criminal and chronic alcoholic.

Sensational criminal charges are often used to discredit religious leaders. The head of the Jehovah's Witnesses, for example, was accused in a long press attack of black marketing and collaboration with Nazi occupiers.

The Jehovah's Witnesses and the Baptists were also accused of listening to foreign religious broadcasts. One defendant in the Baptist trial, Sovetskaya Byelorussia said, had her teenage son record the shortwave transmissions for later listening.

The paper said the Baptists also asked a Canadian relative visiting the Soviet Union as a tourist to smuggle out "slandering inventions" about repression of believers.

BRANDT ... here for talks with Nixon.

Brandt Lands In U.S. For Talks With Nixon

Washington (AP) — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt arrived in Washington Sunday for two days of talks with President Nixon on U.S.-European relations.

The visit follows the proposal six days ago by presidential adviser Henry Kissinger that the Atlantic Charter, drafted 32 years ago by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, be rewritten to revitalize the partnership.

Brandt made only a few comments upon landing, saying he feels his visit is taking place at a "particularly favorable moment." He also expressed sympathy for persons who have been affected by flooding on the Mississippi River and its tributaries.

The chancellor is to meet with Nixon Tuesday and Wednesday. U.S. officials believe the meetings could be especially significant since Soviet Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev is to visit Brandt in May.

Nixon and Brandt also might try to coordinate their positions on the East-West talks before the next NATO ministerial meeting in Copenhagen in June, officials indicated.

Congress To Eye Controls Authority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returns Monday from a week long Easter recess to face an immediate decision on extending the President's wage-price control authority.

The authority expires at midnight Monday, and Congress is expected to extend it for one year.

However, there is a threatened snag in the Senate, which must act first on the legislation. Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., has vowed to block it until he gets action on his postcard voting registration measure. McGee wants the Senate to limit debate on his bill.

Some Senate opponents of a series of provisions in the wage-price bill reportedly hope to win a simple, unrestricted one-year extension by taking advantage of the McGee bill maneuvering to stall the vote until shortly before the midnight deadline.

The provisions would:

- Require corporations to justify any price increase of 1 1/2 per cent or more.
- Exempt workers paid $3.50 an hour or less from wage controls.
- Authorize the President to allocate fuels across the country to meet demands and maintain competition.
- An effort to prohibit $150 million for U.S. bombing in Cambodia and other Indochina expenses is pledged Thursday when the House Appropriations Committee marks up a supplemental money bill.
- Nixon's tax reform proposals are to be presented to the House Ways and Means Committee Monday by Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz who has said no overall tax increase will be proposed.

Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., says he will try to block the $150 million for Cambodia bombing and other U.S. activities in committee and, failing there, will take the effort to the House floor.

This is not new money but part of $500 million for which the Pentagon has asked authority to transfer from other defense funds.

In other action, the House is to vote this week on a $3.8 billion mass transportation bill and a measure that would require Senate confirmation of a President's budget director.

Jeweler Studs His Sidewalks With Diamonds

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Milk and honey isn't flowing in the streets of this southwest Missouri city, but the residents are walking on diamond-studded sidewalks.

Jewelry shop owner Harry Butterfield decided to dispose of pieces of diamond, rubies, emeralds and pearls in a unique display outside his store, located in a downtown area under renovation. The jewels were scattered over the freshly poured sidewalk, then rolled into the fresh cement.

The phenomenon, however, is no more than a novelty. Butterfield said the assorted collection is worthless because of chips and other damage.

Israel To Expand Civil Rights

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel has decided to expand the civil rights of its 366,000 Arab citizens in a move to reward the Israeli Arab community for its loyalty to the Jewish state in the past 25 years.

Sources close to the government said it had been decided to admit several thousand Israeli Arabs to responsible civil service jobs, to have political parties open their doors to Arab members, and to release large tracts of Moslem-owned land seized by Israel after it became a state in 1948.

Israeli Arabs are those who did not flee and become refugees in the 1948 Arab-Israeli war, but stayed and became Israeli citizens.

Apart from a few hundred who have joined in spy and sabotage acts against Israel, the vast majority have shown allegiance to the Jewish state during 25 years of war against the neighboring Arab world.

Now Israeli Arabs complain that this faithfulness is being ignored.

Only a handful of Arabs occupy high civil service posts. Most political parties do not accept Arab members and Premier Golda Meir's dominant Labor party has created special Arab Socialist factions rather than admit Arabs to its own ranks.

Millions of dollars worth of land which until 1948 belonged to the Moslem Waqf — religious council — have until now been held by the government's Custodian of Absentee Property.

All these points have tended to cast doubt on Israel's claim that its Arab and Jewish citizens have equal rights.

The sources said the main instigator of the new policy was Mrs. Meir. Her office's Arab Affairs Department had commissioned several surveys on the state of the Arab citizenry, and was pleased with the findings.

They added that Mrs. Meir chose this time — the celebration of Israel's 25th independence anniversary May 7 — as what she considered a fitting occasion to reward Israeli Arabs.

Survey: Watergate Damaging To White House Credibility

By LOUIS HARRIS

By a margin of 63-9% the American people feel that the White House has not been frank and honest on the Watergate affair, but "has withheld important information about it." As a direct result of the recent Watergate revelations, President Nixon's overall rating with the public has slipped nine points, from 59% positive in March down to 50% positive this past week.

On the key dimension of "inspiring confidence personally in the White House," Nixon's rating has also fallen off sharply, now standing at 53-33% negative. Back in February, it stood at 49-41% positive.

When people were asked to say in their own words why they feel the way they do about the President, a quarter of the public volunteered that "he has not been truthful, especially about Watergate." This is an unusually high number of spontaneous comments focused on a single issue.

In a survey taken among a

Louis Harris Rating Drops

national cross section of 1,537 households from April 18-23, nearly one-third, 32%, of the public expressed the view that "President Nixon personally knew about the attempt to wiretap Democratic headquarters," "up from 16% who felt that way last October. However, only 34 percent are still prepared to say the President "did not know about the Watergate plans," sharply down from 66% who said that last fall. Another third is not yet ready to decide that question either way.

It is apparent from these results that the jury is very much still out on the Watergate affair on how deeply the President himself might have been involved. But there is little doubt that the whole episode has been damaging to the credibility of this administration. Nixon's rating on "handling corruption" generally now stands at 64-25% negative, down from 55-32 percent negative in February. Specifically, on his "handling of the Watergate affair," he receives 61-17% negative marks.

The cross-section was asked: "Do you feel that the White House has been frank and honest on the Watergate affair, or do you feel they have withheld important information about it?" CANDOR OF WHITE HOUSE ON WATERGATE

	Total Public
Frank and honest	50%
Withheld important information	43%
Not sure	28%

This result ties in closely with the rating Mr. Nixon received when the cross section was asked: "How would you rate President Nixon on his handling of the Watergate political spying case — excellent, pretty good, only fair, or poor?"

NIXON HANDLING OF WATERGATE

	Total Public
Excellent pretty good (positive)	17%
Only fair poor (negative)	81%
Not sure	22%

The trend on whether the President "personally knew about" Watergate shows a sharp fall-off in the number who express confidence the Chief Executive was not involved.

"Do you feel that President Nixon personally knew about the attempt to wiretap Democratic headquarters or not?"

April '73 Oct '72 Sept '72

	25%	32%	11%
Nixon knew	32%	16%	11%
He did not know	34%	66%	66%
Not sure	34%	18%	23%

On the score of "handling corruption in government," an already negative rating for the President has become even more negative.

"How would you rate President Nixon on his handling of corruption in government — excellent, pretty good, only fair, or poor?"

NIXON HANDLING OF CORRUPTION

	April '73	Feb '73	Oct '72	Sept '72
Positive	25%	32%	32%	11%
Negative	64%	52%	52%	66%
Not sure	11%	13%	13%	23%

The impact on Nixon's own personal confidence levels has been most damaging. Periodically, the Harris Survey has asked:

"How would you rate President Nixon on inspiring confidence personally in the White House — excellent, pretty good, only fair, or poor?"

NIXON ON INSPIRING CONFIDENCE PERSONALLY

	April 1973	March	February	January	December 1972	April	January	November 1971	July	February	October 1970	February	December 1969
Positive	33%	38%	48%	44%	48%	32%	49%	43%	44%	43%	54%	58%	62%
Negative	53%	50%	41%	52%	48%	52%	45%	46%	52%	54%	40%	38%	36%
Not sure	14%	12%	11%	10%	8%	16%	5%	9%	4%	3%	6%	4%	2%

The current low rating for the President on inspiring confidence is nevertheless not the lowest for him since he took office. In fact, a year ago he stood at 52-32% negative on this dimension. His history in the White House has been to slip to low ebbs and then to recover by some dramatic series of moves which have restored public confidence in him.

To a degree, this resilience is reflected in Nixon's overall job rating.

"How would you rate the job President Nixon is doing as President — excellent, pretty good, only fair, or poor?"

OVERALL NIXON JOB RATING

	April 1973	March	February	January	December 1972	April	January	November 1971	July	February	October 1970	February	December 1969
Positive	50%	49%	59%	53%	59%	30%	58%	53%	44%	43%	54%	58%	62%
Negative	49%	49%	39%	44%	39%	69%	41%	46%	55%	54%	40%	38%	36%
Not sure	1%	2%	2%	3%	2%	1%	1%	1%	1%	3%	6%	4%	2%

The Nixon years have been marked by sharp ups and downs in his overall standing. As a result of Watergate, he has fallen off 9 points in a single month, but he is still a considerable distance above his lowest point recorded in February of 1971, just before he made his dramatic moves toward China and Russia. What happens in the future, however, may largely depend on the outcome of the Watergate episode. And much of that, in turn, depends on what Nixon himself says and does.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Strike independent stance—let others know what you want and odds are that you will get what is needed. One in authority is willing to change procedures in manner favorable to you. Know it and deal from position of strength.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Avoid writing letters while angry. Measure words. Some around you would be pleased if you make a slip based on impulse. Be mature. Rise above the petty. One who taught you in past is available for consultation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Check tendency to spread efforts too thin. Finish what you start. Refuse to be tempted into concept that grass must be greener elsewhere. You have plenty that is of value. No need to sell yourself short.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplaine

San Francisco — About 8 on Sunday morning, the youngest daughter arrived on the doorstep carrying a small black kitten. Her eyes were full of tears and her heart was full of guile.

She said: "It's an orphan." I said "I've told you I can't keep a cat right now. I'm going to be away."

She said "I'll just feed it something. She's starving."

Well, she gave the kitten some milk. The kitten sniffed at it and said NO way. Another little girl arrived. They heated the milk.

They cooed. They petted the kitten. They said "Poor little orphan."

A neighbor lady came to the door. She said "Is it really all right? They said you wanted a kitten."

She said "I've got four more. Besides the mother."

I said thanks. I was full up on cats.

I yelled at the other room "Come in here! I want to talk to you!"

She said "What about?" I said "About orphans."

Sunny days (The kitten ran up the drapes leaving little strings of material. I said: "Take that orphan back to its mama.")

Here's a bloke who owns a pub down in Louisiana. Kept his cash box under the counter.

Well, each day he was a little short. If he had a bartender, he would have figured the bartender was knocking down on him. But he did his own bartending.

Then one day he saw the corner of a $10 bill sticking through a crack in the floor. Pulled up the floorboard and found a rat's nest lined with $460 in green bills.

The point is the rat took only cash. Never touched a check.

Summery mornings around Snug Harbor I said "Is that cream in my coffee? Are you trying to collect my life insurance?"

Last night I got hooked on one of those morbid magazine pieces "Are Saturated Fats Killing You?" (I must stop reading these things. Some day I'll die of a misprint.)

Anyway, it said many powers of industry have had their electricity shut off by pouring in cream and butter.

"There are more ways of killing a cat than stuffing it with butter," said grandma. She was full of wise quotations.

There are more ways, but no better way. Watch it, cats.

When science is figuring how much butter you can take without blowing a fuse, they use laboratory rats.

Lab rats lead a terrible life. Constantly subjected to physical and mental tests that would bug a deacon.

Some people are against using animals for experiments. But they never speak up for the laboratory rat.

If a rat can shake a barkeep for $460, I will say something good for them. Hey scientists! Quit bugging those poor rats!

The rats are bugged on butter. Then science writes the article.

that bugs me for morning coffee. Double-barreled. They get the rat and me.

Anyway, I read another magazine a year ago in a doctor's office. It said it wasn't butter. It was sugar.

I read something the other day on how many mailmen are bitten by man's best friend, the dog.

They are doing something about this in Germany. In Dortmund — home of the great beer — the post office teaches the mailmen the biting habits bred by breed.

Fat mailmen should stay off routes with Doberman Pinschers. Something about fat men annoys these dogs — there's always a critic somewhere.

Boxers let the mailmen walk by. Then they go for him with a body block from the rear. Dachshunds approach with wagging tail. When the mailman is off guard, they nip him in the ankle.

The pamphlet winds up: "Never trust a poodle."

I said "I'll bet that kitten isn't housebroken either." And I was so right.

Final contract — seven spades.
Opening lead — king of hearts.

Milton C. Work was far and away the outstanding authority of auction bridge, the fore-runner of contract. His was the one, big name in auction just as Culbertson's was the one big name in contract, starting in the 1930's.

Work made two great contributions to bridge. One was that he published several books on auction bridge which were so well received that sales ran into the millions.

His other contribution — point count — did not come into widespread use until some ten years after his death in 1934, but when it did it was all-pervading. Today practically everyone uses Milton Work's 4-3-2-1 point count.

Here is one of Work's favorite hands. It illustrates that most dramatic of all plays in bridge, the squeeze.

Declarer wins the heart lead with the ace and trumps a heart with the eight. East cannot afford to part with a diamond or a club, so he undertrumps dummy's eight.

South plays a spade to his hand and tries a diamond finesse, which succeeds. Another spade to his hand is followed by another diamond, dummy's ace gobbling up West's king.

Declarer then cashes the A-K-Q of clubs and queen of trumps to produce this position:

North
♦ J 3

West
♥ Q 8 7

South
♦ J

South now plays his last trump, discarding a club from dummy, and scores the last three tricks regardless of what East elects to discard.

ABBY: let it alone

DEAR ABBY Our daughter, who will be 18 in a few months, "disappeared" last month. We reported this to the police. Then we found out that she is living with a man out of state.

Should we try to bring her back and file charges with the FBI against this man for contributing to the delinquency of a minor (Mann Act, etc.) since he either took her out of the state or provided funds for her to go? What if we go thru all this only to have her move out and resume living with him the day she turns 18? She claims she loves him.

URGENT IN CLEVELAND DEAR URGENT: There are many unanswered questions: Why did she leave in the first place? If she wasn't kidnapped by this man, chances are she was "delinquent" before she left. What would you accomplish by pressing charges against him? If you want to punish your daughter and this man, you are holding all the aces now. But if you want a better relationship with your daughter, don't try to bring her home against her will. Unless she's one in a million, you'll hear from her when she needs a friend, which I suspect will be soon.

DEAR ABBY: For nearly two years, I've been the secretary to the world's cheapest man. I like my job, but I don't like the way my boss takes advantage of me. A refreshment cart comes around twice a day, and each time he asks me to get a cup of coffee for him. It costs 25 cents a cup, which I pay for because he never has anything smaller than a $20 bill. He has never offered to pay me back, and it's been running me about $2.50 a week.

He's cheap in other ways, too. He gave me a lift twice and both times we went over a toll bridge he asked me for the money to pay the toll. He has also bummed dimes from me to use a public telephone. Please print this. He may see it and recognize himself.

BROKE IN BROOKLYN DEAR BROKE: He's probably too cheap to buy a newspaper. Carry change for a twenty and produce it when he says he has no change. If that fails, TELL him you can't afford to support his coffee habit any more.

A Bevy Of Brides Take Mid-Spring Spotlight

MRS. CLYDE MAUK

In the chapel of the Westminster Presbyterian Church on Saturday evening, April 28, the wedding of Miss Terri Kay Hinkle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norris S. Hinkle of Hastings, and Clyde E. Mauk, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lon A. Mauk, took place at 7 o'clock. The ceremony was solemnized by Dr. Robert Palmer.

Miss Marijane Hinkle of Hastings was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant.

Loren Mauk served his brother as best man, and seating the guests were Ted Hinkle, brother of the bride, and Greg Spady, both of Hastings.

The bride chose a gown of sheer organza patterned with Venice lace in a floral motif. The Empire bodice, designed with a high neckline, contoured with a minute ruffle of organza and lace, and long sleeves, was closely fitted above the floor-length A-line skirt which extended into a chapel train. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held held to the head with a bandeau of embroidered Venice lace, and she carried a nosegay of daisies, yellow roses and gypsophila.

Upon their return from a honeymoon trip to Acapulco, Mexico, Mr. Mauk and his bride will reside at 5140 So. 48th St., Apt. 5.

MRS. GLEN SCHULTZ

The wedding of Miss Teresa Axberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Axberg, and Glen Schultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Schultz of Walton, was solemnized at the First United Methodist Church in Waverly on Saturday evening, April 28.

The foursome of bridal attendants included Mrs. Monte Swartz, who served her sister as the matron of honor; maid of honor Miss Lou Ann Harms of Waverly; and Miss Lucy Axberg and Miss Wanda Axberg, the bridesmaids.

Dennis Francke attended Mr. Schultz as best man, and the groomsmen and ushers included Geoff Schneider of Eagle, Randy Dalby of Waverly, Gale Schultz of Walton, Monte Swartz, and Roger Hammons of Weeping Water.

The bride appeared in a gown of silk organza and French lace, designed in the princess mode. The lace, which formed an overlay for the fitted bodice, framed the sheer yoke beneath the lace wedding band collar and capped and cuffed the Bishop sleeves. The lace was repeated in applique, to pattern the A-line skirt which was completed with a chapel-length train.

The bride is a sophomore at the University of Nebraska where she is majoring in speech pathology. Mr. Schultz, a former student at the university, recently has completed a tour of duty with the Army National Guard.

MRS. THOMAS COLE

At a 7 o'clock ceremony which was solemnized on Saturday evening, April 28, the marriage of Miss Lois K. Albrecht, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Albrecht of Great Bend, N.D., to Thomas O. Cole, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Cole, took place at Faith Lutheran Church in Lincoln. The bride's father read the lines of the service.

Mrs. Larry Rand of Kadoka, S.D. was the bride's honor attendant; and the bridesmaids included Mrs. Arnold Rose of Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Bill Mattes of Wakefield, and Mrs. Dick Bergt.

Ken Swanson of Chadron attended Mr. Cole as best man, and the groomsmen and ushers included Howard J. Cole and Richard Cole, both brothers of the bridegroom, Joe Towns, Stanley Hutchinson, and S. Sgt. Paul Albrecht of Tacoma, Wash., brother of the bride.

The Victorian gown chosen by the bride was fashioned of white silk crepe, accented with lace-edged ruffling. The ruffle motif, which contoured the high collar and ornamented the cuffs of the Gibson sleeves, patterned the bodice to create a yoke effect, and was repeated to border the train which gave back interest to the A-line skirt.

The bride is a graduate of Stewart's Beauty School in Sioux Falls, S.D. Mr. Cole will be graduated in May from the University of Nebraska College of Business Administration.

MRS. KEVIN GEMMELL

At a 7:30 o'clock candlelight ceremony on Saturday evening, April 28, the marriage of Miss Jayne Ann Summers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn D. Summers, to Kevin Gemmell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene W. Gemmell, took place at St. John's Catholic.

Miss Pam Knoell was the maid of honor, and completing the bridal entourage were Mrs. Bob Jarrett, the bridesmatron; and bridesmaids Miss Patty Weesner and Miss Susie Copple.

Milan Steube attended Mr. Gemmell as best man, and the corps of groomsmen and ushers included Doug Gemmell, Pat Gibbons, John Crose, Wayne Summers, Kirk Gemmell, and Robert Olson.

Organza and Cluny lace fashioned the gown worn by the bride. Above the softly gathered A-line skirt the Empire bodice of tucked organza was ornamented with a panel of lace, and the lace was repeated to contour the high collar and to cap and to cuff the sheer Bishop sleeves. Her lace-bordered mantilla veil was chapel length.

The bride is a junior at the University of Nebraska where she is majoring in interior design, and where she is a member of the National Society of Interior Designers. Mr. Gemmell attended Lincoln Technical College and now is a technician with the Nebraska Air Guard.

MRS. STEVEN H. HARRAL

On Saturday evening, April 28, the wedding of Miss Susan Jane Keel, daughter of Mrs. Lorna M. Keel, and Steven Henry Harral, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Harral, took place at the Southview Christian Church. The 7 o'clock ceremony was solemnized by Dr. Harold D. Edwards.

The bride's two attendants were her maid of honor, Miss Jody Huenink of Roca, and bridesmaid Miss Candi Schuler of Lawrence.

Douglas Harral served his brother as best man, and the groomsmen and ushers were George Cook, Mark Harral, a brother of the bridegroom, and Don Graham.

The bride chose a princess gown of satin in the candlelight tone for her wedding. The long-sleeved bodice was designed with a high neckline, contoured with a lace-edged ruffle, and wide, lace-bordered ruffles ornamented the sculptured bodice in a pinafore effect. Her floor-length veil was a lace, patterned in a floral motif, and she carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations and yellow cymbidium orchids.

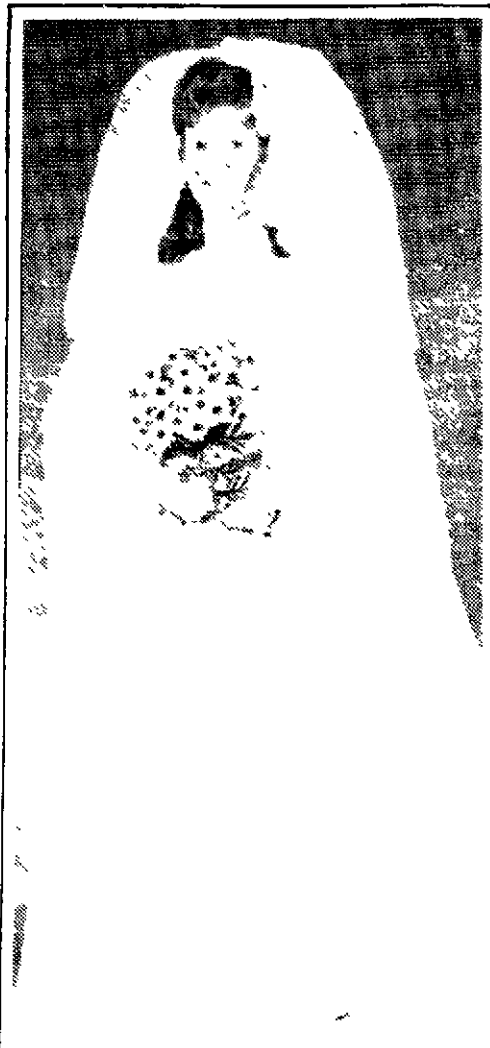

After May 6, Mr. Harral and his bride will be residing at 2411 B St.

Mr. Harral attended the University of Nebraska, and served for two years with the U.S. Navy. He now is an electronics technician at Bryan Memorial Hospital.

CARMAN-HARSH

The marriage of Miss Esther May Carman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Strong, to Richard Wayne Harsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Harsh of San Bernardino, Calif., took place at a 2 o'clock ceremony, which was solemnized on Sunday afternoon, April 29, at the Tabitha Home Chapel. The Rev. Vernon Jacobs read the lines of the service.

Mrs. Lonnie Rech served as the bride's matron of honor and only attendant.

Kenneth Hueske attended Mr. Carman as best man, and Robert Carman, Lonnie Rech, Clark Maseman and Neal Barnesberger seated the guests.

The bride's gown was fashioned of satin and organza in the Empire mode. The fitted bodice featured a mandarin collar trimmed with peau d'ange lace, which also cuffed the long, Bishop sleeves and beneath the raised waistline, a wide band of lace accented the softly-gathered skirt. A lace bandeau held in place her chapel-length veil and blushers.

After May 7, the couple will reside at 2163 So. 8th St.

It's Zoo Time!

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

They've all been spruced up and fluffed up and now are just waiting for Tuesday, May 1. Who's that? Why, the feathered and furry creatures at the zoo, that's who.

Opening Day at the Arnett R. Folsom Children's Zoo is set for Tuesday — rain or shine. All the preparations have been completed. The grounds have been cleaned and the gardens gardened. The animals' homes and the buildings in Zooville have received their new coats of paint. The Zoo Crew has been contracted, and the animals placed in their summer homes.

Such a lot of work there is in readying the zoo!

But there were other tasks to be completed. Some were relatively minor operations. The Mute Swans, a new variety in the Swan Pool, had to have their wings clipped so they wouldn't stray from their new home. That was taken care of just the other day when Curator George Smith and Assistant Director Sam Wolff performed the surgery and then set the feathered creatures free to frolic in the water.

However, other preparations were so monumental that they will remain incomplete through at least the beginning of the zoo season.

Although construction of the new Sea Lion Pool and storage house began last fall, the work goes on. When completed, the new addition to the zoo will be well worth the inconvenience — the three sea lions will be the first such creatures to become residents of Lincoln, and zoo-goers will have the opportunity to become acquainted with those valuable animals which are undergoing the threat of extinction in their natural habitat.

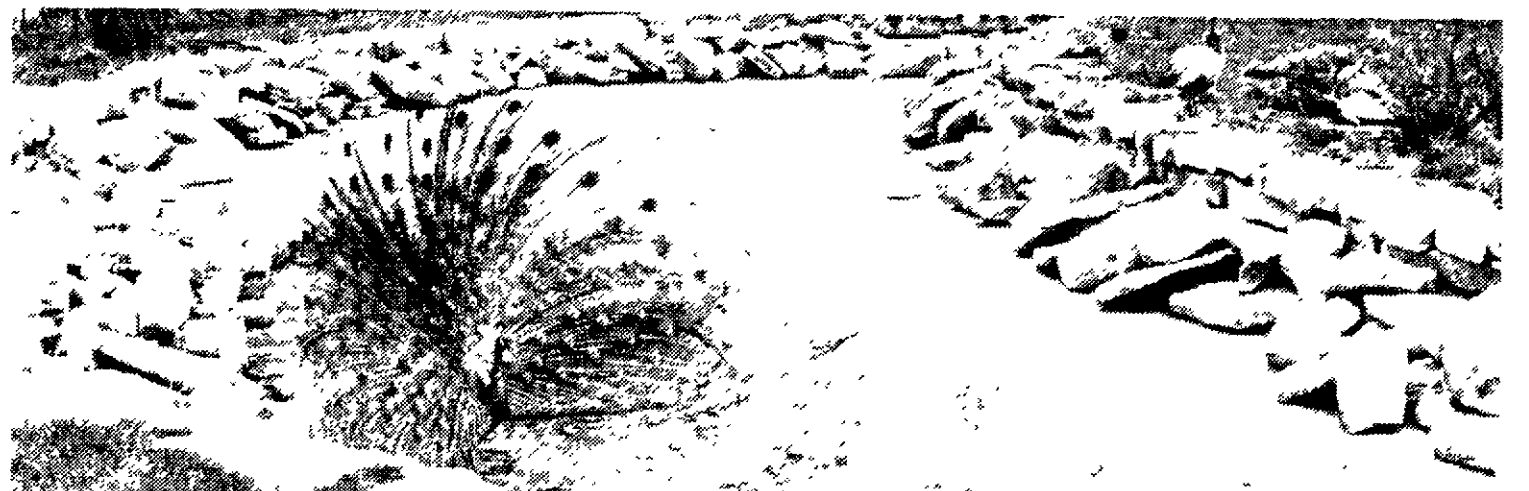

Other new additions at the zoo already have been completed. They include Walleroos, acquired by the Arnett R. Folsom Zoological Society. The Walleroos will reside in Kangaroo Court with their smaller relations, the Wallabies (whose babies are ready to leave their mothers' pouches any day now and begin life on their own).

Also, according to Zoo Director, Bob Spencer, the Children's Zoo will have a new colony of Coati-mundis, a variety of South American raccoons, and Jack Rabbits and Capybaras — the world's largest rodents resembling 100 pound guinea pigs — will roam through the zoo to their hearts' content.

The animals, old and new, are anxious for opening day at the zoo. Aren't you?

Rep. Sikes Of Florida Is Winner Of First J. Sterling Morton Award

By SAM THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau
Nebraska City — Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes of Florida was named the first annual winner of the J. Sterling Morton Award in a ceremony on the steps of Arbor Lodge here Sunday.

Sikes, a 32-year member of Congress noted for his forestry and conservation legislation, was conferring with state foresters in Idaho and was unable to appear as guest speaker. His award was accepted by Ken Pomeroy of the American Forestry Association.

Named winners of the communications award in the companies and corporations division was the Datsun-Nissan Motor Co. The corporation projects award went to Hunt-Wesson Foods.

The awards competition, announced at the centennial observance of Arbor Day a year ago will be repeated each year by the Arbor Day Foundation. The non-profit foundation was created last year to promote awareness of the importance of trees and encourage their planting and conservation.

The annual awards program, emceed by transplanted Nebraskan Gordon MacRae, was held under the east portico of Arbor Lodge, the estate of Arbor Day founder J. Sterling Morton. It was preceded by a parade up Central Ave. to the lodge.

Retired U.S. Forest Service

chief Ed Cliff made the awards presentations, with assistance from MacRae, Mrs. J. James Exon, and Glenna Huntington of the U.S. Forest Service in Denver, who headed the foundation's awards committee. MacRae, accompanied by the Bellevue Strategic Air Command band sang the national anthem, "American the Beautiful," and "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning."

from "Oklahoma," the movie version of which starred MacRae.

Mrs. Maxine Morrison made her 17th Arbor Day appearance, singing "Trees."

Sikes is credited with legislation expanding fire-protection programs for trees in cooperation with the states, rehabilitating watersheds damaged by strip mining and erosion, and for his key support of the 1964 Wilderness Act.

In the current congressional session, Rep. Sikes is sponsor of a bill that would offer incentives for tree planting on private timberlands.

Datsun-Nissan was honored for its "Drive a Datsun—Plant a Tree" promotional campaign, in which money for planting one tree was donated to the Forest Service for each test drive of a Datsun automobile.

Hunt-Wesson Foods' honor was in recognition of its First National Children's Forest program. The company had a seedling planted in one of three designated National Forests for each product label sent in by a customer.

Groups given "association awards" by the foundation were the American Association of Botanical Gardens and Arboreta, Future Farmers of America (Minnesota Chapter), Utah Federation of Women's Clubs, Silver Springs, Md. Chapter, Izaak Walton League, Keep American Beautiful, Inc., Saw Mill River Chapter (Chappaqua, N.Y.) of the National Audubon Society, the California

Council of Garden Clubs, the Alabama Daughters of the American Revolution Society and the Alaska section of the Society of American Foresters. Presented "media awards" were the Cincinnati Enquirer, newspapers, American Forests Magazine, KMOX Radio of St. Louis, Mo., WJXT TV of Jacksonville, Fla., and Barr Films of Pasadena, Calif.

THE PADDOCK

By Mark Gordon
Star Sports Writer

'Different' Grandmother

Grand Island — If you think all 50-year-old grandmothers sit around a cozy fireplace and knit, then you haven't met Dorothy Hallock.

"My husband (veteran horse trainer George) had to go to Del Mar in California about three years ago, when we were running horses at Denver," the silver-haired trainer said. "He didn't have anyone to look after his nine horses, so he asked if I'd do it."

And that's what the Springfield, Colo., grandmother does whenever George has business elsewhere. She has trained horses at Fanner Park, LaMesa Park in Raton, N.M., and Centennial Park in Denver.

The Hallocks plan to take 19 horses to the Ak-Sar-Ben meeting in Omaha which opens its 55-day run Tuesday. Among the runners will be Back To Jack, a $20,000 claimer from Oaklawn Park, King Terry, a $17,500 claimer from Oaklawn, Smart Hack, English Jack, Slipped Peg, Slipped Again, Vegas Hour, Queen Marie, Julie Go By, and Valley Cadet.

Dorothy owns Slipped Peg and Slipped Again and is a co-owner of Hanks Jet, Julie Go By and Love O'Gold.

"It's a lot of hard work training horses," she said. "I hot-walk them by hand (cool the horses off after a race) and then I watch their legs, massage them and fix their bandages."

Non-Racing Days

"If there's a problem, George and I discuss it, and if it's too bad then we call in a vet," she added. "When they're racing, it takes nearly all day long to get them ready. We have to bath them and brush them and get their legs ready."

"And even when they're not running we still have to gallop them, clean their stalls . . . It's as much work as if they are racing. I usually get to work about 6:30 in the morning and sometimes don't get done until 8:30 at night."

The Hallocks, who will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary this August, have had a cattle ranch in Springfield for many years. In the 25 years, George has been in the horse business, the pair have always worked together on farm chores, so it really isn't that unusual when George left three years ago, Dorothy became the trainer for the horses in Denver.

Besides training for her husband, she also conditions horses for Bud Ogden, Jim Loflin, R. A. Lotspeich, and Tom Wagon.

Although the Hallocks have owned hundreds of horses during their quarter-century in horse racing, she is quick to name her favorite runner.

"Old Rivers had more personality, than any horse we've ever had," she said. "I'd say to him, stick out your tattoo at me, Old Rivers and he'd do it. He'd eat apples, oranges, carrots, just anything."

"When we retired him (at age 11), they played Old Man River for him at Denver," she said. He's my sentimental favorite, although I don't know if you could say he was the best horse we ever had."

Old Rivers, whom the Hallocks claimed for $8,000 at Del Mar, won the Beef State Handicap at Ak-Sar-Ben and the Centennial Mile at Denver.

He still holds two track records — a 1:18 1-5 set on April 9, 1966 for 6 1/2 furlongs at Fanner Park and a 1:35 4-5 reading while winning the Centennial Mile at Denver.

"I guess I'll still be training horses until I'm too old to do anything else," she smiled. "But I love my horses. I'll tell you that. There's nothing else I'd rather do than train them."

Dodgers Drop Pirates Twice

By Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates are having an up and down year and the season is only in its first month.

After a quick start when the Pirates won eight of nine games, Pittsburgh has dropped its last five to come back to the field. The Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the Pirates in both ends of Sunday's doubleheader 9-8 and 2-1 to push them into third place, one game back of the front-running New York Mets.

Elsewhere in the National League Sunday, New York blanked Atlanta 1-0, Chicago blasted San Diego 10-4, St. Louis stopped San Francisco 8-3, Houston edged Montreal 4-3 and Cincinnati shut out Philadelphia 8-0.

In Sunday's American League play, the Yankees took two from the Minnesota Twins 6-3 and 11-1. Chicago blanked Boston 5-0, Detroit topped Kansas City 6-1, Oakland defeated Baltimore 4-1, Cleveland beat California 3-2 and Texas edged Milwaukee 2-1.

After Tom Paciorek's 13th inning run-scoring double had produced the Dodgers' victory in the opener, Willie Davis' game-winning triple and the eight-hit pitching of Claude Osteen gave Los Angeles the sweep over last season's Eastern Division winners.

At Atlanta, the Mets staked Jerry Koosman to one run which proved enough as the slender left-hander was even stinger. He limited the Braves to only four hits to up his record to 4-0.

Cubs' pinch-hitter Paul Popovich delivered a two-run single during a four-run sixth inning for the victory over San Diego.

Lou Brock's base-loaded triple, following a two-out error by

San Francisco third baseman Ed Goodson, capped a six-run outburst that helped snap the league-leading Giants' six game winning streak.

At Houston, Cesar Cedeno was balked home with two outs in the ninth inning by Montreal pitcher Tom Walker as the Astros came from behind to nip the Expos.

Jack Billingham pitched a five-hitter, striking out nine, while teammate Bobby Tolan supplied the offensive punch with five runs batted in as Cincinnati blanked Philadelphia.

Ron Blomberg broke out of a slump with a tie-breaking two-run single in the first game and two RBI hits in the night cap to lift the Yankees to a sweep over the Minnesota Twins.

At Boston, Wilbur Wood's seven-hitter and second-straight shutout combined with home runs by Bill Melton and Dick Allen for Chicago's victory over the Red Sox.

Joe Coleman scattered eight hits and batterymate Duke Sims hit a two-run homer as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Kansas City Royals.

Oakland's Catfish Hunter won his first game of the season with last-out relief help from Rolie Fingers to help defeat Baltimore.

George Hendrick's ninth-inning lead-off homer was the winning run in Cleveland's victory over California.

Run-scoring singles by Dave Nelson and Toby Harrah with two outs in the ninth inning gave the Texas Rangers a 2-1 victory over Milwaukee and prevented the Brewers from moving into first place in the American League East. The Rangers had been blanked six times until their ninth-inning explosion.

Links' Davies Returns, Track Team Hopes Up

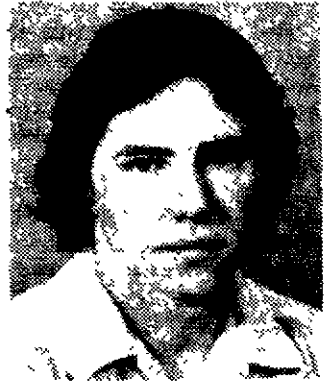

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

An athlete's value to his team isn't measured strictly in terms of performance.

There's a psychological factor, too. Mere presence can mean something positive and affect teammates' attitudes.

It happened last week with John Havlicek and the Boston Celtics . . . and it happened with Rex Davies and the Lincoln High track team.

Davies has taken only two competitive long jumps this season, but he's the state leader in the event. And the Links, consequently, have become very prominent in state championship track discussions.

Rex Davies

"With Rex back, our team has a completely different outlook. We were really down for awhile until he came back," says Lincoln High track coach Harold Scott.

In March, Davies was anticipating improving his fifth place finish in the triple jump at the 1972 state meet and hoping to be among the state long jump leaders.

But mononucleosis knocked the Links' senior out of the competitive picture. He returned to practice eight days ago and helped spark his teammates to a second place finish, 5 1/2 points behind unbeaten North Platte in the Trans-Nebraska Conference meet Saturday at Grand Island.

"I was just going to let Rex triple jump yesterday," Scott related Sunday, "but he wanted to take a couple long jumps, too. I wasn't too happy about it, but I let him."

Davies' first jump was 22-9. He stretched 23-1/2 on the second try. It boosted him into the state lead and Scott elected not to have his standout long jump the rest of the day.

"But we made a mistake in the triple jump," admitted the veteran Lincoln High coach. "We passed and forfeited the last two triple jumps and it was evident Rex was feeling all right. If I had been over there, I would have let him jump."

As it was, Davies stretched 44-5 1/2, the state's fifth best effort in the event this spring. It, however, ranked only third in the competition behind fellow Capital City jumpers Jim Glen of Southeast and Gary Stansbury of Northeast.

"Rex went 45-6 at state last year and would have been near that twice Saturday," said Scott. "but you have to measure where his hands fell back."

"We can't afford to lose any points from our top performers because we don't have a middle group like North Platte came up with," notes Scott.

"Rex is a tremendous competitor," the Lincoln High coach adds. "He pole vaulted 13-0 last year and we still may get him in that event if he had more time and could work it out."

"I'd also like to run him on our sprint relay. He's as fast as anyone we have in the 220," pointed out Scott, who is thankful for the opportunity to start calculating for the state meet less than three weeks away.

With state shot put leader Mike Fultz, state discus leader Charles Baldwin and middle distance-distance runners the calibre of Mick Damian, Adam Loos and Phil Hunt in the Links' stable, Scott has a definite state title contender.

Bellevue, Omaha Burke, North Platte and Omaha South may be casting a wary eye toward the Links, who have an old performer back . . . and a new outlook.

Knicks Credit Tough Defense

BOSTON (AP) — The New York Knicks credited hard nosed defense Sunday for their series-deciding victory over the Boston Celtics in the National Basketball Association's Eastern championship playoff.

"Our defense picked them up right away, that was the key," said old pro Walt Frazier, who hit for 25 points in the Knicks' 94-78 seventh game triumph before a packed crowd of 15,320 and a national television audience.

"We knew we had to play physical and aggressive," said young Dean Meminger, who came off the bench at the start of the second period and rallied a sluggish New York offense.

"We were physical and aggressive from the start," Meminger added. "In the last three games, we played well enough, but weren't physical enough and lost. I felt we just had to beat them here today. We have a lot more depth than the Celtics."

"They were playing with a two man offense, Dave Cowens and Jo Jo White, and you can only play so long with that," Frazier said. "What (John) Havlicek did to us in the last two games was a miracle. Today we forced him to use his right hand more."

Havlicek, playing with a possible dislocated right shoulder, managed just four points, two on free throws. Cowens and White scored 24 and 22 points respectively, but the New York defense stopped other Boston shooters.

The 78 points was the fewest by a New York opponent this season.

"Their defense took a lot away from us and, in my estimation, that's what always wins," Havlicek said.

"New York played great and won it," Boston Coach Tommy Heinsohn said. "We got beat, that's all. We weren't flat. The ball just wasn't going in the basket for us. We had good shots, but the ball just wouldn't go in." The victory sent the Knicks into the NBA's championship series against the Los Angeles Lakers. The first game in the best-of-seven showdown will be in Los Angeles Tuesday night.

Sikes Misses Two-Foot Putt

... SUDDEN DEATH NEEDED

DALLAS (AP) — Lanny Wadkins earned the Byron Nelson Golf Classic title Sunday on a flubbed two foot putt by heartbroken Dan Sikes at the first hole of sudden death and found it "a shock—hard to enjoy" although the missed stroke meant about $500 an inch.

The 23-year-old Wadkins, taking his first tour title of the year and the $30,000 first prize parred the 553-yard par five No. 15 playoff hole and watched in amazement when Sikes blew the near gimmie for a bogey. Sikes won $17,100.

"I had accepted the fact he was going to make it and was thinking about the next hole," said Wadkins, who birdied five of the last seven holes for a three-under-par 67 to tie Sikes.

A dejected 42-year-old Sikes, seeking his first four victory in five years said of the putt "I just jerked it. I'm not very proud of it."

"What happened to me today ought to teach anyone never to look at the scorecard. I saw I was the only under par while I was on the back nine and thought I could play to the clubhouse and win with two under."

Sikes made a 40-foot par putt on the 18th hole to tie Wadkins at three-under-par 277 with a final-round 71.

"That putt was like an explosion," Wadkins said. "It was hard to accept. But I had battled all day. I wasn't even on the leader board when I was two over par at the 11th hole. I didn't know how I stood until I got to the 18th tee."

Sikes said he didn't like the fact he was hurried to the extra hole by the television people.

"I would have liked to sit down a minute and collect my thoughts," Sikes said. "I don't want to alibi, though."

Wadkins said "I felt hot and I was ready to jump out there."

Sikes appeared all but out of it when he ducks hooked his tee shot into the woods off the 18th tee on the final 429-yard, par four hole. His approach sailed over the green and he hit a bad chip shot to the fringe. However, Sikes rolled a curling, 40 footer home and let out a shout of joy to the thundering cheers of the gallery.

Wadkins had birdied five of the last seven holes on putts of 10, 15, 6 inches, 20 feet and matched Sikes' putt with a 15 footer of his own on the 18th green.

Both Sikes and Wadkins finished at three-under-par 77. The 42-year-old Sikes, who started the day four under along with Bob Dickson for the lead, shot a final-round, one-over-par 71 on the treacherous 6,932-yard Preston Trail Golf Club.

The 23-year-old Wadkins, who trailed Sikes by seven shots at one juncture, sizzled the course with a three-under-par 67, including a 32 on the back nine.

Wadkins began his charge on the 12th hole with a bird. He followed it with birdies on 13, 15, 16, 18.

Sikes, attempting to strike a blow for the middle age set and win his first tournament in five years, birdied the 16th hole with a tap-in 18 incher to set up his miracle par on the 72nd hole.

Dickson limped in with a 3-over-par 73 for third place money for 279—one under par. Only three players broke par over the demanding course which was whipped by gusty 30 miles an hour winds.

Bruce Crampton shot an even-par 70 to complete the tournament at par 280.

Defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez shot a 75 to finish far back at 292. Arnold Palmer had a final round 77 for a 289.

Wadkins won the Sahara Invitational last fall in his rookie year and set a record with $116,616 for the most money won by a first-year player. His best finish this year was a tie for second at Phoenix.

He has now won $75,392 this year.

Shecky Greene—Will He Or Will He Not Run In Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Another comedian got into the act Sunday as the hour of decision neared for the 99th Kentucky Derby with anywhere from 12 to 20 horses still listed as possible starters.

Trainer Lou Goldfine said a decision will be made Monday on whether the speedy Shecky Greene, named for the comedy-an, will start in next Saturday's Derby.

"Among others, Mr. Joseph Kellman is conferring with Buddy Hackett about what to do, but to be honest with you, I'm recommending that we pass up the race," Goldfine said.

Meanwhile, trainer George Handy said Braulio Baeza had agreed to ride Imoecunious in the Derby, replacing Jorge Valasquez, who is on an enforced vacation for rough riding.

Handy said the cut foot his colt suffered in last week's Blue Grass Stakes, where he finished in a dead heat for third, is healing nicely, but that it still leaves this week's training schedule a question mark.

Trainer Forrest Kaelin said Palermo and Nedeff's Vodka had a mild colic attack Saturday night, eliminating him from the field for Tuesday's Derby Trial.

"He seemed okay this morning, but I'll just have to wait and see about Saturday. If he's not 100 per cent sound, I'm not going to take any chances," he said.

Vodka, a little animal by Derby standards, won the Le Comte Handicap and was second in both the Louisiana and Arkansas derbies this year.

The Kentucky Derby favorite, Meadow Stable's Secretariat, galloped lightly around the Churchill Downs track Sunday, as did his stablemate and nemesis in the Wood Memorial, Angle Light.

"The pressure is about the same. It's always there," said trainer Lucien Laurin, who handles both horses and won the Derby last year with Riva Ridge.

"In fact, trying for two in a row adds some pressure. Nobody's done it since Jimmy Jones, have they?"

Also out for a gallop was Our Native, with one of his three owners, Dr. E. W. Thomas of Lexington, supervising the workout. Trainer Bill Resseguet, also one of the owners, was away for the day.

Dr. Thomas, also the breeder of the Flamingo winner, isn't listed in the program, however, because being an owner doesn't make that much difference to him.

"The money I put into it was more for the breeding part of the horse. That's where my real love of the sport is, so I just told Bill to list the ownership in the program any way he wanted."

Dr. Thomas said

Ehret Captures Gals Golf Title

Birmingham, Ala. (UPI) — Gloria Ehret drilled in a 15-foot birdie putt Sunday to defeat Clifford Ann Creed and defending champion Betty Burfeindt in a sudden death playoff in the Birmingham Classic Tournament.

Miss Ehret won the $4,950 first prize on the first extra hole.

Miss Creed and Miss Burfeindt each got $3,300 for their second-place tie.

Omaha Captures CHL Title, 6-0

DALLAS (AP) — The Omaha Knights captured their third Central Hockey League playoff championships in five years here Saturday night, blanking the Dallas Black Hawks, 6-0, in the seventh and deciding game of their series.

The Knights opened the bombardment with a goal by Weldon Bennett five seconds after the opening face-off and continued the assault for a 4-0 first period lead against Hawk starting goalie Michel Dumas.

All-CHL goalie Mike Vessor took over in the second period and surrendered goals in each of the final two sessions as the Knights won four of the five games played on Dallas ice. The two clubs split two games in Omaha.

After Bennett's goal, Brian McKenzie scored the first of his two goals, followed by Alan Young and Doug Horbul.

McKenzie's second goal came at 3:11 of the second period with Jean Lemieux drilling in the final Knight goal at 2:15 of the final period.

Ray Reeson kicked out 20 Dallas shots in notching his first playoff shutout.

Rail Crossings At Grade Provide Hazards

Question:

Can problems be solved before further deaths, injuries

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

There are 364 places in Lancaster County where a distracted motorist — or pedestrian — could get run over by a train.

Of the 404 railway-auto conflict points in the county, only 40 have grade separations, where the road goes over or under the tracks.

Despite the symptoms of unplanned railroad growth in the county and Lincoln — perhaps because of it — Lancaster County's Railroad Transportation Safety District (RTSD) and Nebraska's Legislature lead the nation in an innovative approach to removing the hazardous trains pose to motorists.

There are plans underway, some in advanced stages, to remove three lines in the county, eliminating at least 91 conflict points, according to Marvin Nuernberger, RTSD executive secretary.

And LB144, passed this legislative session, to become law 90 days after the Legislature adjourns, provides incentive payments or bonuses to any city or political entity that will close a railroad line.

The RTSD, formed less than two years ago, is the only political entity in the U.S. with taxing authority to relocate tracks, eliminate some highway-railway crossings and improve safety at others.

Questions Remain
Some questions remain, however: Can the crossing hazards be eliminated or tracks re-routed before a train squeezes a motorist inside a mass of metal? Can that be accomplished before such an accident foment public outcry and steamrolls the railroads and officials into a too speedy or ineffective solution?

Case in point:
On Jan. 19, a Lincoln man was trapped in his pickup for more than an hour after being struck by a train at 19th & Y. The train was travelling only 10 miles an hour yet it carried the pickup more than 300 feet. The truck ended up on its side, twisted between two trains. The driver of the car told police he never saw or heard the train. He escaped with minor bruises and scrapes.

In 1972 in Lincoln, seven motorists were struck by trains, according to reports compiled by the Public Service Commission (PSC) formerly the State Railway Commission.

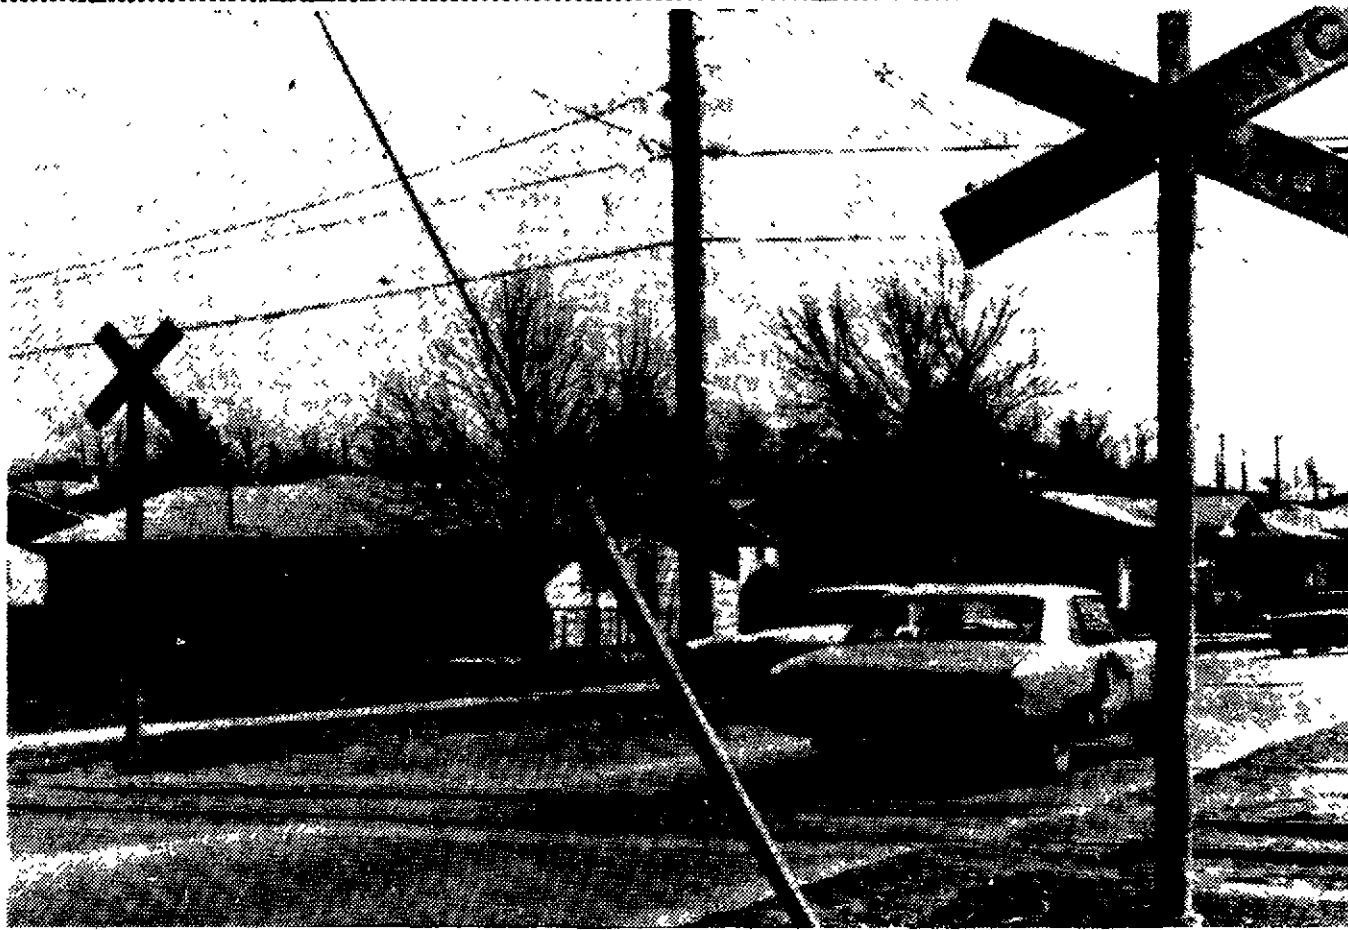

Four of those motorists received personal injuries — broken bones. Although the time of day was not a factor (three occurred in daytime hours, four at night), there was property damage in all seven mishaps.

Crossbucks Only
In two of those injury accidents, the only crossing protection was a crossbuck on both sides of the tracks. There were audio and visual signals at the other two injury sites.

Across Nebraska in 1972, 37 people died in 137 motor vehicle-train accidents, and 88 were injured. That means only 12 people escaped injury. There was property damage in all 137 collisions.

Of three pedestrians who were struck by trains in the state last year, two were killed, one was injured.

In all 140 accidents, 86 occurred during the day, 54 at night.
There are three ways to diminish such hazards.

DANGEROUS ... house blocks view for motorists approaching 56th & X conflict point.

—First, signalize the crossings. Install bells, flashing lights, and in high-risk areas, arm levers that lower and block traffic.

“The evident problem in this,” Nuernberger points out, “is that you're stacking up traffic and not getting maximum use of streets. Traffic jams cost individuals' time.”

—Second, separate them. Elevate the road or the tracks.

“You'd get a smoother flow, no loss of time and good protection,” he says, but construction costs for grade separation are in the Golden Spike range.

For example, building costs have been estimated at $500,000 for a railroad overpass at 27th on Neb. Hwy. 2 when it is widened to four lanes. Contrast that — for only one crossing — with RTSD's total annual budget of $367,000 for all projects in the county.

—Third, relocate the railroad tracks into one common corridor.

On lines that now run through town, trains are limited to 10 miles an hour maximum. That not only ties up auto traffic; the slower train speeds tie it up longer, aggravating an already existing nuisance.

Nuernberger explains that a corridor would result in more rail traffic running at higher speeds, which could increase the danger factor.

Cross Fewer Streets
The corridor, however, would cross fewer streets, solving one major problem in Lincoln-Lancaster County. Fewer auto-rail conflict points would necessitate fewer signalizations and grade separations.

Moreover, Nuernberger says, the corridor would “make it more feasible to separate with lesser investment.”

Fewer minor streets would cross the corridor, where signalization would provide sufficient protection. Their smaller number would require lesser construction costs.

Such a corridor is in the planning stages along Lincoln's west side, roughly along 3rd Street. If accomplished, it would eliminate 61 train-car conflict points.

Growth Haphazard

It took 101 years for Lincoln-Lancaster County to decide that rail routes should be planned. Only since the RTSD was formed have any positive planning measures been taken.

Haphazard as it was, railroad growth was solicited heavily and, historically, was the major reason for the county's growth.

In 1867, Lincoln had the State Capitol, 500 people and no railroads. By 1871, when the population had grown to 2,450, one railroad angled into the northwest corner of town.

Twenty-four years later, Lincoln's railroad spider-web looked much as it does today, and the population had mushroomed to 55,100. Cars, and hence auto-rail conflict points, had not yet been invented.

In 1937 when Lincoln boasted 75,900 residents, major arterial streets — crossing railroad tracks — had sprawled out roughly to the extent of today's city limits.

By 1970, Lincoln's population of 149,500 had 83,400 registered vehicles to cross railroad tracks. According to an RTSD study, by 1990 there could be 135,000 registered vehicles. Thus the need for resolution of rail-auto conflict points becomes more apparent.

Crossings are an “impediment as far as community growth is concerned,” Nuernberger says, also citing the safety factor for children and pedestrians.

Trying For Agreement

“We've been trying to get a plan going that's agreeable to the railroads,” Nuernberger explains. The RTSD meets monthly with the five railroads that run in the county to plan removal of lines from the city's center.

But the railroads have customers — such as lumber companies — in the city's heart that must be served. “What rights do people (customers) have when you take a railroad away from them?” Nuernberger asks.

Furthermore, effects on city growth must be taken into account.

Chicago & Rock Island proposes to build a yard southwest of town, Nuernberger says. The existing track south of Hwy. 2 leading to the South Industrial Park would extend to the yard.

CORRIDOR ... proposed.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY: Writer Probes Charges Against Equity Funding

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

Prudent investors don't cry over spilled milk, but they do weigh the lessons of experience.

In this framework, the scandalous allegations against the ill-fated Equity Funding Corporation of America should be appraised. With litigation pending and other legal actions to come, it's premature to draw final conclusions as to the accuracy of all the charges. But there is already enough smoke to set up some yardsticks for future investment guidance.

First, this insurance and investment fund scandal is a reminder to be skeptical in face of the fashion of computerizing the process of investment selection and to be wary of overvaluation of technical market factors. Secondly, the adventure in exploiting the credulity of honest folk recalls the aphorism of the original J. Pierpont Morgan, who said that the best collateral for a loan is character. My own observation of men and money over the decades is that there is no substitute in business for managerial integrity and competency.

Thirdly, the glib assumption by the SEC and the public that “inside information” is a passport to making a fortune should be challenged.

Fourthly, instead of propagandizing the wisdom of security analysts, investment advisory services, fund managers, and investment counsellors, we should reaffirm the fundamentals of Joseph Pulitzer, the newspaper giant, whose slogan was “accuracy, terseness and accuracy.” It's the function of CPAs and security analysts to check facts,

Merryle
Rukeyser
Lesson

not to accept hook, line and sinker self-serving propaganda.

Fifthly, as to the charges of phantom life insurance contracts, the regulatory authorities should go beyond protecting the solvency of insurers and should be more customer minded. Incidentally, the possibility of deception shows the necessity of verifying the existence of outstanding insurance policies through sampling tests.

Sixthly, the Equity Funding situation is a reminder that uncritical acceptance of profit reports is risky. Indiscriminate worship of earnings would legitimize brothels, robbery and all other anti-social and inherently unsound activities. For example, it is reported that the reputable firm of Anderson, Clayton & Company, whose affiliate, the Ranger National Life Insurance Company, had bought insurance contracts from Equity Funding, had asked the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. to look over the Equity Funding business about which, prior to the blow up, there had been adverse rumors. The accounting firm evidently attempted to carry out the assignment, but on its third visit to Equity Funding it was ordered out of the premises. Yet the people who had engaged the Peat, Marwick firm, nevertheless, continued to do business with Equity Funding.

Propane Fire Does Damage To Converter

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

A fire Sunday evening caused “considerable” damage to a propane gas converter north of Lincoln Aviation hangars in the Lincoln Air Park, according to Dist. Fire Chief C. J. Cadlick.

Cadlick and Chief Fire Inspector John Gabarron said the blaze may have started when a pipe broke on the vaporizer of the propane converter.

Firemen stayed at the scene two hours while the vapors burned off before they could extinguish the fire and cap the valves. Gabarron said the vaporizers were ruined and a door of a mixing shed nearby was burned.

The two 40-foot standby propane tanks, source of the blaze, are owned by the Lincoln Airport Authority. Gabarron said, and hadn't been used in some time. He said the tanks service three buildings in the general aviation area.

Burning Trash Starts Blaze In Apartment

Fire in a faulty building incinerator Sunday night caused “considerable” damage to an apartment occupied by Kurt Garmaker, 1630 G. Apt. B, firemen said.

Fire Lt. Roger Chapp said bricks in the chute-type incinerator were loose and flames from burning trash came up between the flooring and started the blaze in the apartment above the incinerator.

There were no injuries, firemen said.

Meaning Of Amendment No. 2 Disputed

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Charter Amendment No. 2 has been called just about every name in the book: from “abomination” and “bad government” to “sound, necessary legislation for highway planning.”

On top of that, many Lincolinites just wish someone would tell them what the amendment is all about before they go to the polls Tuesday.

But one thing is clear: No one can agree on just what the effects of the amendment would be.

The amendment would set new planning procedures for the city to follow on road projects costing in excess of $15 million. Before construction could get under way, the unanimous vote of the City Council would be required, or failing that, a majority vote of the people.

The battlelines have been formed.

On the one side are the amendment's proponents, led by the Coalition Against the Radial, which spearheaded an initiative petition drive to place the item on Tuesday's ballot.

On the opposite side are the mayor, City Council, Chamber of Commerce, former mayors and councilmen and several other groups.

The Coalition has claimed that the amendment would:

—Apply only to major road projects costing over $15 million constructed totally at the city's expense —Provide for additional citizen input by requiring a public hearing and 30 days notice of that hearing.

—Require the Planning Department to compile an objective analysis of the project to be presented to the council at a public hearing.

However, city officials have maintained that the amendment would have much broader negative effects by:

—Halting or delaying scheduled road improvement projects, such as 70th, So. 27th and the airport access road improvement on Cornhusker Hwy.

—Delaying repair of chuckholes in front of your house and on arterials.

—Changing the planning process by taking responsibility out of the hands of the mayor and public works director and placing that power in the hands of the planning director.

—Giving one council member the veto power because a unanimous vote of the council would be required before construction of certain projects could get under way.

—Tying the city's hands by putting in the charter — the city's constitution — detailed and lengthy planning requirements.

Additionally, Mayor Sam Schwabkopf has said the amendment would not necessarily halt the Northeast Radial.

In a legal opinion issued April 23 to the City Council, City Attorney Dick Wood said that, “While many of these requirements have merit in substance, I believe their implementation is more properly a subject for the elected council members to accomplish by resolution or ordinance.”

However, Coalition Chairman John Stevens Berry — an attorney — responded that the charter already contains many detailed requirements.

He pointed out that Lincolinites will be voting on two other charter amendments Tuesday — district election of councilmen and raising councilmen's salary to not more than $4,000 annually.

“To place such matters in the charter constitutes the ultimate in detail and inflexibility,” Berry charged.

Additionally, city officials have charged that the amendment would tie the city's hands by putting detailed planning procedures into the charter that could soon be outmoded by changing federal guidelines. That inflexibility could cause loss of federal funds, they claimed.

Responding to critics' charges that the amendment would delay or halt 70th, So. 27th and other scheduled improvements, the Coalition contended that all those projects are on the federal aid system — and thus not covered under the proposal.

Proponents have maintained that federal and state guidelines always would have precedence over the charter amendment. However, the mayor has charged that if this is the case — the amendment would not cover the Northeast Radial, either, which he said is on the federal aid system.

The Coalition pointed out that the amendment would cover only those projects costing in excess of $15 million in which the city would foot the entire bill.

Projects of that magnitude in which the city decides to go it alone are rare, the Coalition said.

The mayor has charged the amendment would weaken the “strong mayor” form of government by removing responsibility for scheduling road project out of his and the public works director's hands.

“This would project industrial growth to the south,” he says, noting that city planners must consider whether or not they want that.

Current plans call for a three-way compromise elimination of tracks, contingent upon creation of the common corridor.

First, the Chicago & Rock Island line from Hwy. 2 to 27th & Capital Parkway would be abandoned. To service customers north of that intersection, trains would move up the west corridor, turn east and come down from the north.

Major Conflict

That plan would eliminate a major conflict point at the 27th & Capital Parkway intersection. Long-range plans to abandon the tracks south from Hwy. 6 would eliminate 26 more.

Second, the RTSD wants the Missouri Pacific and Rock Island to combine east of Lincoln, “possibly as far east as Weeping Water,” Nuernberger says, and use one common track.

Abandoning that Missouri Pacific track weaving southeast through Lincoln from No. 27th to Hazelwood would eliminate 30 more conflict points east of 33rd St.

The west corridor on 3rd St. would eliminate Union Pacific tracks on 4th St. UP's and Burlington Northern's common use of one east-west track north of town would eliminate 35 more conflict points.

In the last year, according to Nuernberger, the RTSD programmed (provided more protection) at 14 grade crossings in Lancaster County.

High danger points have been keenly eyed, such as at 56th & X, where there have been four near-fatal accidents.

A particular sore spot is the Rock Island crossing at 20th and O, where elimination seems almost certain, because separation would be too costly, Nuernberger says.

Combining BN with UP on the line to Lincoln's Municipal Airport would remove a restricted undersized bridge over Oak Creek, Nuernberger explains, which would aid in the 50-year flood plain plan for that area as well.

Viaduct Sought

Another hazard is the grade crossing on Cornhusker Hwy. near Interstate 80 that leads to the airport. That crossing, Nuernberger says, is “a tie-up” for motorists trying to catch planes. “The Department of Roads is working to provide a viaduct” at that location, he notes.

The track combination of BN and UP at the entrance to the airport Ramada Inn would provide more protection, with signalization and arm levers, not now installed.

Yet another massive track removal and consolidation on No. 27th between Leighton and Worthington would eliminate a high-risk area.

RTSD's completion of the first Railroad Transportation Study has been one factor in spearheading Lincoln-Lancaster County's eligibility for a pilot demonstration project.

Both the Senate and the House acted on the 1972 Federal Aid Highway Act, which would have provided 70% federal funding of RTSD's railroad relocation plans, but Congress adjourned without adopting any compromise legislation and the measure died.

Under current legislation, federal funds are available only when improvements are made on crossings over state highways.

Coalition spokesmen have labeled this statement “preposterous.”

They point out that the planning director would be required to compile an analysis of the project. The report would be presented to the City Council at its public hearing — thus not bypassing the mayor or anybody else, the Coalition contended.

Opponents of the amendment have charged that one council member could be given “more equal” status by use of his veto power.

Proponents countered that no council member would have the last say — the people would because the question would then go to a vote of the people.

Although not agreeing on the effects of the amendment, one thing both sides do admit is that the issue is one of the most complicated ever presented to Lincoln voters.

Amoco Planning Relief Wells

Williamsburg, Mich. (AP) — New wells are to be drilled near this northern Michigan community Monday to reduce underground pressures that are forcing eruptions of natural gas and water.

Officials said Sunday that one well would be drilled Monday about a mile south of the Acme Creek area where the latest eruptions took place Friday night. The area is about four miles west of Williamsburg, where the eruptions began April 18.

Amoco Production Co. planned to reopen a relief well 4½ miles southeast of Williamsburg — near the well that state officials have blamed for the eruptions.

The Amoco relief well was sealed Saturday after gas was found at the 900-foot level — much higher than expected. Officials said it was being reopened to help reduce underground pressures and in the hope that it would provide more information on the source of the eruptions.

Officials from the State Department of Natural Resources said pressure in some of the blowholes in the Williamsburg area appeared lower Sunday. Instruments showed the ground clear of gas at some points, they said.

Gas readings in the Acme Creek area remained high, however.

Officials said no new evacuations have been ordered since Friday night when the latest eruptions forced expansion of the area that is being kept clear of vehicles and people. A total of 67 families have been evacuated since the start of the eruptions.

Officials have attributed the eruptions to a leak at the 2,600-foot level of the original Amoco drilling project. They said the lead allowed gas to enter a porous layer under great pressure and travel toward Williamsburg and beyond.

The gas surfaced at weak points in the earth, especially in artesian wells.

The original Amoco well was sealed from top to bottom Wednesday, but officials said it would take several days before any effect was noticed. The drilling firm is a subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. Indiana.

URW Local 286 Ratifies Contract

United Rubber Workers (URW) Local 286 Sunday afternoon ratified the master contract between the union and Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., according to Bob Wallen, union vice president.

Wallen said about 300 URW members attended the ratification meeting. Some members took exception to certain parts of the contract, he said, but the union vote ratified the entire contract as presented.

The agreement, to take effect if a majority of URW members nationwide ratify it, provides for a 77.8 cent per hour increase over the next three years, with an additional three cents hourly night differential.

The package also includes an early retirement plan with a supplemental benefit and increases in normal pensions.

Goodyear and the URW agreed to terms of the contract last Wednesday, after negotiating since March 12. Ratification of the three-year master contract affects about 1,880 Goodyear employees in Lincoln, including about 1,550 URW members.

Dental Group Votes To Accept Students

The House of Delegates, legislative body of the Nebraska Dental Association (NDA), Sunday voted to allow dental students at Creighton and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln to become members of the house.

House Vice President Dr. W. E. Murphy of Neligh said the action would probably be effective about "a year from now."

At its 105th annual meeting in Lincoln, the House of Delegates also reaffirmed the NDA's position supporting LB449, which would require fluoridation of Nebraska municipalities' water supplies.

Murphy said, "Oral surgeons are not paid by insurance carriers for the same surgery for which they pay a physician." The group resolved to seek a solution to that "discrimination" in the payment procedure, he said.

In other business, the delegates considered setting up a peer review across the state to investigate third party insurance payments for dental work, and formed a committee to review the present system in Nebraska, Murphy said.

Quiet Little Cambodian Village Emptied By Bombs And Guns

ON THE EAST BANK OF THE MEKONG, Cambodia (AP) — Until the war caught up with it, Chong Tole Sap was a quiet little village of 200-300 souls.

Its inhabitants made their modest but comfortable living either from the Mekong River 300 yards to the west or from the rich rice fields that flank it on the east and the groves of banana, mango and sugar palm trees that shelter it from the burning Cambodian sun.

Then about a week ago the fighting that has ripped up much of Cambodia descended on Chong Tole Sap, just two miles east of Phnom Penh. Most of the villagers fled.

Sunday morning, their homes were nearly deserted. Two American warplanes from Thailand, an F4 Phantom fighter and an F111 fighter-bomber, filled the air with the thunder of their engines and rocked the fertile soil a half-mile beyond it with their bombs.

A company of soldiers from the Cambodian 51st Brigade stole through the orchards, forded a shallow stream and burst in on the empty settlement with automatic rifles, machine guns and grenade launchers popping.

Top Ceramics Honors Go To Mrs. Warner

York (AP) — Mrs. Hester Warner of Chester won two top awards in the Nebraska State Ceramics Show which concluded here Sunday.

She had the best work by a professional and was cited for the best entry in the show.

The so-called "Freddie" award for the best piece of art went to persons in three categories: children, Lisa Midkiff of Omaha; senior citizen, Mrs. Anna Conrad of Omaha; and amateur, John Ainsworth of Omaha.

There was little fire coming back and no one was wounded.

Only two villagers remained in Chong Tole Sap when the soldiers entered, along with some cows, dogs and chickens that refused to abandon their homes.

Most of the guerrillas had fled before the advance, choosing not to fight it out. All along the bank of the creek the government soldiers had to cross to get to the village were sturdy bunkers of clay and wood, built in the North Vietnamese army style to survive all but the biggest bombs. Had the enemy stayed inside, they would have been hard to dislodge.

The two American warplanes swooped in low about 800 yards from the hamlet, dropped their bombs and pulled steeply back up into the clouds. They released napalm and 500-pound "hard" bombs, which do their damage with torn steel. Their target was not visible.

The Cambodian major who led the assault on Chong Tole Sap said about 400 rebels were in the area. They avoided contact with the government soldiers and appeared to be spread out over a wide area so that bombs could do them little damage.

This is the problem with much of the Mekong's embattled eastern shoreline. Military experts estimate about 5,000 Khmer insurgents, with North Vietnamese or Viet Cong advisers in some units, have moved in along 28 miles of the riverside north and south of the capital.

So far, the high command has acted without alacrity to dislodge and disperse them. They have spread to islands in the

POGO

ALBERT BEIN BESET BY THE DEMON PUTS ME IN MIND OF SOME OF THE EXOTIC AND EXCITING ADVENTURES I'VE HAD IN MY TIME.

ONLY MODESTY PREVENTS ME FROM BUSTIN' OUT AND TELLIN' YOU. ONCE IN A WHILE I BE PERSUADED TO RECOUNT A TALE FROM MY PAST. BUT NOT OFTEN.

ONCE IN A WHILE A SPECIAL FRIEND WILL ASK -- AND, AS A FAVOR TO HIM, I'LL TALK ABOUT THINGS WHICH I'D RATHER NOT.

YOU'LL NEVER HARTA TELL ME -- I RESPECTS YOU FOR NOT WANTIN' TO TALK. A FRIEND IS SOMEBODY YOU DON'T HARTA TALK TO.
